STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association honored member herds with outstanding records during Tuesday evening's annual meeting banquet. Herd management award winners, along with the 1999 lowest somatic cell herd, were announced during the meeting.

D. Ellis Dix, a Wayne County dairy producer, was recognized as the Clyde Robison Leadership Award winner. This award is given by the association to a DHIA member who has volunteered unselfishly to DHIA and to the dairy industry.

According to John Castrogiovanni, DHIA Board member, Dix has been very active in just about every dairy and agriculture organization imaginable, from promotion to farm preservation to DHIA. He was named a Pennsylvania Master Farmer in 1989 and encouraged other farmers from Wayne County to

Miller, Jackson Are 2000 Holstein Hall-Of-Famers

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The words "Salt of the Earth" come to mind when considering Pennsylvania Holstein Hall of Fame inductees honored during this year's annual banquet late last week.

Ben Jackson and Paul Miller were honored as the 2000 inductees. Jefferson Yoder was recognized for being a 1999 inductee.

The honor came as a complete surprise to both Jackson and Miller, who found out that they were this year's inductees during slide presentations about their farming experiences and family history. The slideshows also highlighted the roles they played in advancing the Holstein breed in Pennsylvania.

Though Yoder already knew he received the award, he was still equally humbled by the tribute to his life and his involvement in the Holstein breed.

When Jackson was born in 1932, farming immediately became a part of his life. He still lives on the farm where he grew up in Wetona.

According to Patty McMurray, chairperson of the Hall of Fame committee, "Jackson is a product of his environment, and the ripples sent out from this small community at the base of

Plum Pox, New Materials Under Scrutiny At Meeting

ANDY ANDREWS

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — One positive effect of last year's drought was that fruit tree diseases were slight to nonexistent. As a result, sometimes growers forget the problems associated with fruit trees in a wet year, including scab, apple rust, and others, according to Jim Travis, a Penn State plant pathologist.

And growers must cooperate with state and federal agencies to stop the plum pox virus or there could be serious consequences to the industry, according to another Penn State pathologist, John Hulbrendt.

The plant pathologists spoke to about 60 growers and agri-industry representatives Wednesday at the Penn State-sponsored York and Lancaster County Tree Fruit Growers' Educational Meeting at the Farm and Home Center.

Though the plum pox virus (PPV) was identified only about four months ago in Adams County orchards, it remains "one of the hottest topics of fruit meetings" Hulbrendt attends, he said.

The PPV virus Strain D can add up to big losses for growers, reaching as high as 80-100 percent. The virus, he explained, first showed up in Macedonia and Eastern Europe in about 1910-1913 and has spread all over the world.

The virus was introduced to the United States a few years ago, brought in by infected ma-

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers closed .50 lower. Finished steers made up a larger percentage of the total receipts than cows for the first time in months. Although the fat cattle market has slipped lower at the local auctions over the last few weeks, prices are still running well above the bids that major packer buyers are carrying in the country. Demand from smaller specialty butchers and Kosher plants has kept prices at a respectable level on the open market, especially for the high Choice and Prime cattle that continue to be in short supply. Western feedlot prices opened the week slightly lower, but good dressed beef movement and an improving futures market helped prices end fully steady to firm at 68.00-68.50 live and mostly 108.00 dressed. Local Holstein steers finally succumbed to downward pressure and ended the week steady to 1.00 lower, while slaughter heifer prices closed weak on a thin test. The slaughter cow market ended mostly steady with some strength noted on the leaner types. Slaughter bulls finished steady to 1.00 lower. Supply included 41 percent slaughter steers, 7 percent slaughter heifers, 38 percent slaughter cows, 7 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1160-1490 lbs 68.00-71.00, few up to 74.50. Choice 2-3 1170-1480 lbs 66.60-69.00, high dressing 1-2 up to 70.00; 1500-1600 lbs 63.00-67.75. DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was slow to fair at best. Seller offerings varied by both volume and size, but remained fully sufficient for current inquiry. Live supplies were at least moderate; weights varied in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were unchanged at 45 to 57 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. In the parts complex, bone-in breasts and tenders were noted as in close balance. Other items were at least adequate with boneless skinless breasts generally noted as in the better balance.

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

In Chicago, prices were lower. In the Eastern region, prices were unchanged to lower. Elsewhere, prices were unchanged. The market tone was weak. Demand ranged slow to no better than moderate, mostly light to fair, and was usually best for the limited promotional activity. Supplies of all sizes continued at least adequate to mostly ample. Breaking stock supplies were sufficient from regular sources, however, additional demand often centered around quality product. Light type fowl were fully adequate for current needs.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Feb 23, 2000

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Profit taking on the Board, beneficial rainfall across much of the US, and some export disappointments, weighed on grain and soybean bids. Wheat 6 to 8 cents lower. Corn 4 cents lower to 1 cent higher. Sorghum 7 cents lower. Soybeans 7 to 13 cents lower. Much of the winter wheat growing areas received beneficial moisture overnight and today. However, some places in the South remain dry. More rains are in the forecast for the next few days. Export sales are slow this week for wheat but reports that Algeria is tendering for 4 million bushels of soft wheat and 4 million bushels of durum, limited declines. Sharp losses in corn and bean pits were also due to profit taking and improved pre-planting moisture in parts of the Central US. Export corn sales were light overnight but indications So. Korea is buying another 220,000 metric tons of optional origin corn overnight, underpinned bids. However, many traders feel they will be buying Chinese corn. Soybean exports have been very sluggish this week and overnight reports that China bought Brazilian beans, pressured bids. Good rainfall across the Midwest was a weakening factor.

Oklahoma City, OK

USDA-OK Dept Ag Market News

Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary

Compared to last week: Feeder cattle and calves steady. The good demand for feeders caught many participants by surprise. After Friday's bearish cattle on feed report, showing continued heavy placements and large numbers in feedlots, many thought the feeder market would be sharply lower. Buyers obviously thinking less cattle will be available since more are already in feedlots. Demand remains very good for light supply of stockers and calves. Feeders on wheat have gained extremely well during this mild winter and in much fleshier condition than last year. Feeder cattle are pulled ahead a full 2 weeks. Half to 1 inch of rain received in much of the state Tuesday. Another possible shot of moisture anticipated for Friday. This will be helpful to wheat and spring pastures. Slaughter cows steady to 1.00 higher. Slaughter bulls steady. Packer demand good with most buyers active. Demand continues good for replacement cows. Several strings of good quality long bred heifers off couple ranches sold to very good demand. Total of 560 cows and bulls sold with 40 percent going to packers. Receipts this week 13,291; last week 13,394; last year 14,991. Supply consisted of 76 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 19 percent calves under 600 lbs; 5 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 34 percent of feeder and calf supply. Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

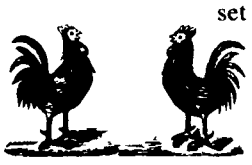
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

FEB. 28-MAR. 5, 2000

ST. DAVID, MARCH 1.

LEAP INTO SPRING WITH CHICKS

It's time to think about starting that clutch of chicks for spring. Wait until the light of the Moon (between March 7 and 18) to start a hen setting. Eggs set on a Sunday produce more roosters, according to the old-timers. Breeders suggest 1 rooster for every 8 to 12 standard-size hens; more than that, and you're apt to have trouble in the pecking order. If you don't have hens to set eggs for you, you can order straight-run (mixed pullets and cockerels) or sexed chicks (separated by sex) to start your flock. Call your local extension service.



We didn't starve, but we didn't eat chicken unless we were sick, or the chicken was.

– Bernard Malamud

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Recycle used or outdated tea bags by steaming them in a pot on the woodstove. They make a great air freshener.

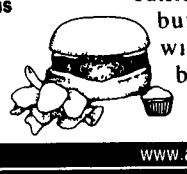
SALMON BURGERS

1 pound salmon, skinned
4 scallions, chopped
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
1/2 teaspoon Tabasco sauce (optional)
1/3 cup bread crumbs
2 tablespoons olive oil
4 hamburger buns
lettuce
tartar sauce (or ranch dressing)

Shred salmon and mix with next 7 ingredients. Form into 4 patties, wrap tightly in plastic wrap, and chill for at least 1 hour (and up to 6). When ready to cook, sauté patties in olive oil for about 3 minutes per side. Burgers should be cooked through and crispy on the outside. Toast hamburger buns, then top each with lettuce, salmon burgers, and dressing.



Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A wet March, a sad autumn.

After a rainy winter, a plentiful summer.

Romanus (Feb. 28) bright and clear indicates a goodly year.

In March, many weathers.

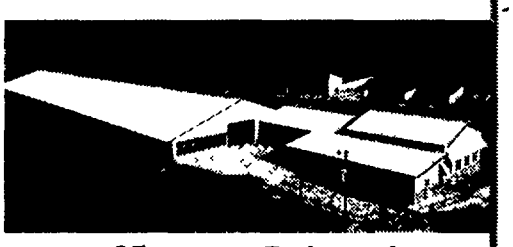
The Building you want.
The Lease you need.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 35 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated deductions: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.
Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

OPINION

In The Hands Of Enemies

We saw in the news this week, that truck drivers are taking convoys of their rigs into Washington D.C. to protest the high price of fuel. Diesel and gas prices have skyrocketed almost overnight, and truckers want government to do something about it. They say they can't make a living at these prices. Last week, many of the independent truckers simply let their trucks set because it didn't pay to work.

To anyone who follows the farm scene, this kind of cry is all too familiar. Farmers use a lot of fuel too. But they have had to cry for at least the last 10 years. Milk prices are at 1978 lows. Hog and beef prices are so low, farmers are going out of business. We suspect that every small business, and that includes farmers, has a tough time with the bottom line these days. In the publishing business, the rise in paper and postage costs almost takes your breath away.

Many business enterprises are being forced offshore and into Mexico. For food production, this means our dinner tables are more and more filled with food that comes from places where sanitation laws and food safety requirements are nil. The American consumer should receive a warning lesson here from this sudden rise in oil prices and the threat to our economy and our livelihood. We depend on oil that touches the lifeblood of every American enterprise in commerce and industry. And we depend on foreign sources for that oil. Our enemies control many of these foreign sources.

You don't need to be a rocket scientist to figure out this is not a good way to run a business, or fill our dinner tables. But with the anti-farming regulations and taxation laws that are quietly being put into place in America right now, it will not be long before our food sources will come from the same sources as our oil, controled by our enemies. Don't be surprised if America is taken over by a foreign power in our lifetime, an enemy who controls our food source. If they control both our oil and our food they will be able to do the job without a shot being fired

Now Is The Time

To Look At Corn Maturities

Pennsylvania corn farmers experienced extremes in heat and dryness last year. Early projections for the 2000 growing season suggests last year experience will be repeated again this year. Extreme heat and dry conditions during corn pollination can sizzle corn yields. Corn specialists suggests that to protect against weather stress, poor pollination and to ensure the highest yields, farmers should plant several different corn hybrids of varying maturities. By planting several varieties which mature at different times, the corn will silk at different times avoiding the possibility of all the corn pollinating at times during adverse weather conditions. This strategy will also spread the harvest period over a longer time period.

To Utilize Corn Maturities

In extremely hot weather, silks will emerge later than the tassel with the possibility of missing pollination. Pollen may die in hot weather before it reaches the silks. It is best to plant different maturing varieties in different fields.

Mixing varieties in the same field will only help the pollination of the early one. The later variety will not be helped. In 30 years of study, University of Wisconsin research by Paul Carter has found no advantage of mixing two or more hybrids together. In his studies, the yields of each variety grown alone was almost always better then when grown in a mixture.

To Prune Tree Branches

Warm days in February and March send many homeowners outdoors to start preparing the yard for spring, according to Dr. Tim Elkner, Lancaster County Extension Horticultural Agent. One chore for this time of year is pruning trees in the landscape. Whether you are removing branches damaged by this year's snowfall or just improving the overall appearance of a tree, be sure to make your pruning cuts the proper way.

A properly made cut will result in rapid healing and decrease the chances of disease infection of the wound. Trees resist the entry and spread of disease and wood rotting fungi by forming protective barriers that isolate injured wood. Contained within the branch collar (the wider base of most branches) is an important barrier or protection zone that prevents the spread of decay.

The branch collar and the raised strip of bark, called the branch bark ridge, mark this important boundary between the branch and. trunk. Pruning cuts that injure or eliminate the collar destroy the protection zone, leaving vulnerable tissues open to infection.

Therefore, the proper pruning cut is a cut made to the outside of the branch bark ridge and collar. Flush cuts must be avoided because they destroy the protection zone and leave large wounds that are difficult for trees to defend.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Clarity of purpose exposes the foundation of the inner heart."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE SAME, BUT DIFFERENT!

Background Scripture:
Matthew 27:62 through 28:20.
Devotional Reading:
John 20:19-31.

A man challenged me, saying: "Surely as a preacher you must know that the resurrection accounts in the New Testament are unreliable. They don't agree about who did what, when they did it, what was said and done. They don't agree as to whether the Risen Christ was a flesh and blood person or a ghostly apparition. The gospel accounts sound like four or more different experiences!"

Yes, I do know that the resurrection experiences in the four gospels are really in disagreement about many of the details concerning the resurrection. Matthew, for example, mentions an earthquake, no minor detail, (28:2), while Mark, Luke and John do not. Matthew says that, on the way to tell the disciples the angel's message that Christ was risen, the women encounter the risen Jesus. John records the encounter but tells us that only Mary Magdalene was present. Luke and Mark say nothing about this incident.

Diverse Forms

Yet, even apart from these details, the risen Jesus they encounter appears in diverse forms: a recognizable physical body in Matthew 28:9, a seemingly physical Jesus who goes through solid walls and disappears in John 20:19-29 and Luke 24:13-25, an unassented body that Mary Magdalene is instructed not to touch (Jn. 20:17), a physical presence they are invited to touch and in which he joins them in eating some broiled fish (Lk. 24:36-43). Matthew, Mark and John agree that the resurrected Christ instructs them to go to Galilee, while Luke speaks of his farewell charge and ascension on the Mount of Olives (Lk. 24:44-49).

Even more troubling for some people is the fact that, although the risen Christ is for the most part represented as the Jesus they knew and followed, there are some who do not recognize him right away–Mary Magdalene in Jn. 20:11-17, the two disciples on the Emmaus road in Lk. 24:13-35 and some unnamed disciples of whom we are told in Mt. 28:17–"And when they saw him (in Galilee) they worshiped him; but some doubted."

Yes, I acknowledge all these discrepancies and others we do not have space to pursue. But, unlike the skeptic who concluded that these discrepancies make the gospels "unreliable," I reach an entirely different conclusion. If each of the four Evangelists had written virtually identical accounts of what Jesus said and did, I would be inclined to regard them as contrived and therefore unreliable. As a contemporary illustration, I submit that, although millions of people were either present or watching on television on the day that President John F. Kennedy was assassinated, there is a wide divergence of opinion as to what happened when he was shot down.

A Paradox

More than that, however, the gospel discrepancies demonstrate that, although this event took place in history, it was much more than an historical event. All the cameras, recording devices and scientific instruments in repertoire could not have nailed down the details of these experiences of the risen Christ. In each of them there was a faith element that cannot be captured on film or recorded by computers. Some people encountered the risen Christ and their lives–as well as the world itself–were changed forever. As a result of this encounter, some ordinary men and women became extraordinary disciples of Jesus Christ. But some, whose doubts were more powerful than their apprehension of the risen Lord, "doubted" and from their freedom to doubt I gain the capacity to believe in the one who was the same Jesus they had known, yet different.

Actually, that is a demonstration of one of the key paradoxes of Christian belief. The historic church has declared that Jesus of Nazareth was fully human and yet fully divine. That is a paradoxical formula that allows us to hold two apparently contradictory beliefs in a creative unity that describes but does not define the nature of our risen Lord. The risen Christ was both the same as Jesus of Nazareth and yet different. It is that difference that has changed the world and us.

Proven First in Soybeans. Now in Corn.

As the first genetically enhanced seed available on the market, Roundup Ready crops continue to make their mark with the growers of America. First with soybeans, now with corn, Roundup Ready has consistently led the way, to bring the most effective options to growers everywhere.

In fact, after only two years on the market, Roundup Ready corn has already proven to be a leader in performance – over 94% of surveyed growers in 1998 said Roundup Ready corn has met or exceeded their expectations.

Plant Roundup Ready corn for performance you can trust.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
February 18, 2000

Dairy Stocks Continue to Build

-January butter stocks up 30.1 percent

-Total cheese stocks up 7.5 percent

-Milk production in January up 4.7 percent

-March advance prices released

According to economic theory, lower milk prices should slow down the growth in the nation's milk supply. But USDA's January milk production report showed no such reaction to economic signals. Milk production in 20 major states in January was 12 2 billion pounds, up 4.7 percent from a year ago. =

Production per cow averaged 1,576 pounds per cow, up 58 pounds or 3.8 percent from a year ago. And the number of milking cows continued to increase. January cow numbers were at 7.76 million head, up 69,000 head

Lancaster Holstein Club Plans Tour

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) - The first stop will be Glen Toctin Farm. The Allen family milks 120 cows in a double-8 Bou-Matic rapid exit parlor. Their current herd average is 23,000 milk, 900 fat, 750 protein. They were the breeders of the popular Glen Toctin Slocum. A highlight in the herd is an 87 point Fatal daughter out of a Celsius. They also dabble in the reds.

Their current herd average is 26,214 milk, 1,109 fat, 900 protein and is home to numerous All-Americans and Jr. All-Americans. A highlight of the herd is Bellwood Linda, a 92-point Bellwood 3-year-old, nominated All-American and making more than 2,000 fat at 2-10. She is considered by many to be the best Bellwood in the country.

Md-Dun-Loafin is the next stop. The Harrison family milks 100 cows in a flat barn. They have a 26,000 pound herd average and a BAA of 108. Miller, Jackson Are 2000 Holstein

Mt. Pisgah influenced him and affected countless others."

Jackson's parents, Scott and Helen, were a huge influence on him, instilling in him a quiet strength and strong faith through example. Though Scott raised Guernseys his entire life, he still passed on the love of the land and farming to Ben.

In 1951, Jackson married his wife, Regina. Two years after they were married, they started milking cows, eventually getting to 34 Holsteins and four children — Dave, Cathi, Dan, and Dean.

"Mt. Glen" was the prefix Jackson chose for his herd when he purchased his first registered Holsteins in 1953.

Testing and classification on Mt. Glen farms began in the early 1960s. Since then, Jackson has owned many Excellent and Very Good Holsteins. Probably the biggest influence in his herd came from a farm a quarter mile up the road owned by Ernie and Tom Young. Woodbourne Pisgah View Chief was the sire who left five Excellents and 10 Very Goods in Jackson's herd.

In 1953 Babe started showing his Holsteins and Guernseys at the Troy Fair. At his first show, he stood dead last. But he still went back year after year. And now he often stands first. In 1985, the Jacksons won breeder and exhibitor honors for both Holsteins and Guernseys.

In 1971, the Jacksons built a new 76 tiestall barn to house their herd, made up of three-quarters Holsteins and one-quarter Guernseys. But then in 1988 Jackson sold the Guernseys from his herd.

Jackson is farming in a partnership at Mt-Glen with his son Dean who returned to the farm after graduating in 1980. According to McMurray, their relationship is remarkable, with Ben willing to step back as Dean makes more decisions on the farm.

The Jacksons have been featured in the Pennsylvania Holstein Profiles, Hoard's Dairyman, and Lancaster Farming. Their farm is always hosting 4-H, FFA, and Holstein events. In 1998, they hosted Governor Casey's "Capitol for a Day" Program.

Robert Rumler, Holstein USA Inc., retired, left, was honored at the awards breakfast for his lifetime of service to the dairy industry. Making the presentation is James Burdette, association president.

The herd averages 28,171 pounds milk, 1,149 pounds fat, and 890 pounds protein. Their 1999 BAA was 107, and they received the Progressive Breeder Registry Award for seven years in a row.

Paul Miller became interested in registered Holsteins as a teenager. In 1951, the Millers purchased their first registered Holstein. And, in 1952, Miller and Art Nesbitt talked his dad into joining the National Holstein Association.

At a young age, Miller made breeding a good herd of registered cows his lifetime goal. In 1956, Paul's father Harrison sold the farm where Miller grew up and helped Miller purchase Great-View Farm in Fishing Creek Valley.

Paul met his wife Patricia when he took a pair of clippers to the electric shop to get fixed. During one of their first dates, Pat asked Paul to sing while she

On April 10, they'll celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary. They have three children, Deb, Jeff, and Mike.

In 1956, Harrison sold the farm where Miller grew up and helped him purchase the Great-View Farm in Fishing Creek Valley where Miller's legacy of great cattle began.

In 1962, Miller talked his dad into classifying their herd. Unfortunately Harrison was killed in a farming accident just days before the classification. Miller decided to classify anyway because he felt his dad would have wanted it that way, and the herd ended up with four Very Goods and the rest all scoring 80 points and above.

In 1967, Miller held the first Great-View dispersal sale to purchase the farm from his mother. He kept the yearlings and calves for his next herd and began milking again in 1968.

The first Excellent came to Great-View when Miller purchased a 3-year-old Don Auger Promise Lad daughter from Paul and Clarence Lytle in Middletown. On her second classification at Great-View, she went Excellent.

The first Excellent cow bred at Great-View was a calf held off from the 1967 dispersal. Great-

The editors of four farm publications were honored for their work in support of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association at their annual meeting last week in Carlisle. They are: Everett Newswanger, editor of Lancaster Farming; Robert McKowen, editor of Holstein Pennsylvania Holstein News and Holstein World; Renee Bates, editor of Pennsylvania Holstein Profiles; and Dieter Krieg, editor of Farmshine. View Sensation Muffet scored 90 as a 4-year-old. Her two most outstanding daughters are listed in Holstein history as being the highest scored full sisters of the breed at 95 and 96 points.

In 1970, the barn at Great-View was destroyed by fire. And, as a thank you to neighbors who helped rebuild it, the Millers sang Christmas carols. From that experience was born "The Singing Millers."

In 1976, the Millers hosted their second herd dispersal so that they could tour the country, singing and visiting the great Holstein herds. Fifty-one head were sold for a new high average in the state of $2,697.55.

When the singing career ended, Miller pursued another lifetime goal and became a Holstein Classifier in 1980. He retired from the classification business in 1997.

Today Paul's son Mike operates Great-View Farm, which now houses heifers from the outstanding herd bred by Miller. In CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Despite the current low milk prices, consignments at the Annual Pennsylvania Holstein Convention Sale still averaged more than three thousand dollars. With 79 lots sold during the sale, the gross income was $240,700.

The top selling animal was Mt-Glen Broker Liberty, cosigned by Ben and Dean Jackson of Columbia Cross Roads. Reese Warner from Frederick, Md., purchased the calf for $12,000. The summer calf is out of a Very Good dam with 41,000 pounds milk. She is sired by Broker-ET who has a TPI index of 956 and sired the 1998 All-American senior three-year-old.

Arthur Rhoderick of Hagerstown, Md., cosigned the second highest selling animal, Art-Acres Wind Tex B 285-ET. Brian Peila of Bernardston purchased the winter yearling for $8,600.

A summer yearling from Solid-Gold Holsteins in Emlenton brought $6,900. Mike and Cindy Weimer cosigned the calf, who was purchased by Donald Albaugh. Penn-Gate Farms in Littlestown had the fourth highest seller, a winter yearling who was purchased by Thomas and Cindy Sheaffer from Carlisle for $6,300.

A July calf brought $6,100. She was cosigned by Pennsylvania Pride Partners in Fleetwood and purchased by Amy Kulick in Carlisle.

Prior to the sale, a Dunloggin' dispersal catalog was auctioned off to benefit the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Scholarship Fund. The catalog was donated by Russell Shopp of York County and brought $400 from Jack Sunday in Carlisle.

The sale was held last Friday evening as the culmination of the Pennsylvania Annual Holstein Convention. People could visit the cosignments throughout the convention at the Thompson/Walton Dairy Farm.

The high selling lot at the Convention was a summer calf that sold for $12,000. From left are Fred Strouse, Tom McCauley, Creedin Cornman, Bill and Cindy Warner representing buyer Reese Warner, cosigners Dean and Ben Jackson and their families, and Brad Walker at the halter.

Father And Son Win Lancaster Farming Drawing

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Mike Weimer, and his son Spencer, were the winners of Lancaster Farming's drawing during the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention and Sale last Thursday and Friday.

Mike won five straws of Lystel Leduc from Alta Genetics, and Spencer won five straws of Chapel Bank Elton Farmer from Sire Power. Lancaster Farming sponsored both the semen and insemination.

The Weimers live on a 90-cow dairy farm in Emlenton (Clarion County). Their rolling herd average is around 27,000 pounds, and they currently have around 85 heifer replacements. Mike and his wife Cindy have been dairy farming since 1987 when they purchased the farm from Cindy's parents, Jim and Dorothy Neely.

Owning all registered Holsteins, the Weimers currently have a B.A.A. of 107.3 for their herd. They own four Excellents and 19 Very Goods as of their 1999 classification. Both Mike and Cindy are very active in the Holstein Association. Spencer and his older sister Sarah are also very active in the Junior Holstein Association.

Spencer is eight years old and in second grade. This year will be his first year in 4-H. Already he is preparing for the summer shows, practicing leading and clipping his animals.

Mike, Cindy, Sarah, and Spencer enjoyed attending this year's Convention. Winning the semen drawing was a highlight for Spencer, who unfortunately wasn't feeling well all day Friday. On Thursday, Mike, Spencer and Sarah traveled to Harrisburg to see the Capitol Building, while Cindy staffed the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program's exhibit during the Convention. The Weimers also sold two calves during the Holstein Convention Sale.

Both Mike and Cindy are on the planning committee for the 2001 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention and Sale, which will be held in the Northwest District. They invite everyone to attend.

Lancaster Farming thanks the many visitors who visited its booth and entered the drawing during last week's convention.

Kirk Sattazahn representing Sire Power selected eight-year-old Spencer Weimer from Emlenton as the winner of Lancaster Farming's drawing for five straws of Sire Power's Farmer bull.

David Hill representing Alta Genetics USA Inc. selected Mike Weimer from Emlenton as the winner of the Lancaster Farming drawing for five straws of Alta Genetics semen.

Miller, Jackson Are 2000 Holstein Hall-Of-Famers

1989, the Millers were awarded the Dairy of Distinction Award.

Since retiring, Miller is still helping dairy producers strengthen their breeding programs. He also enjoys showing and judging cattle. He has been a Lira Gold dealer for the past several years.

According to McMurray, "you don't go to many dairy functions where you don't find Paul Miller spreading his special brand of charm and goodwill."

Jackson Yoder, a 1999 Hall of Fame inductee, was born in Mifflin County. After working on his older brother's dairy farm and driving tractor trailer for awhile, Yoder bought his first farm and purchased 11 registered Holsteins in 1952.

In 1953, Yoder married Reba. Nearly 50 years later, they are still happily married and have three children — Carl, Carol, and Linda.

Most of Yoder's herd at Rocky Side farm can be traced to the original 11 animals Yoder purchased. The first homebred Excellent cow was Rocky Side Lena, a Hilltop Apollo Ivanhoe daughter.

Since then, Jeff has bred 17 excellent cows. Five purchased cows also went Excellent.

Yoder's breeding goals for Rocky Side farm were size, legs, udders, temperament, and percent fat. He concentrated on building consistency in his herd and won the Progressive Breeder Award 19 times from 1967 to 1987.

Once Yoder was established in the dairy business, Rocky Side purchased very few cattle. Most of the heifers were calved out on the farm. However, the excess were sold privately through New Holland Dairy Sales. Yoder also supported the State Spring Sales with consignments.

Yoder's son Carl has worked at Rocky Side farm ever since he was old enough to be in 4-H. Carl and his other siblings were all active in 4-H. Rocky Side cattle often stood at the top of classes at the Eastern Championship Show and Pennsylvania Farm Show.

In 1985, Jeff and Carl formed a partnership, with Carl following the same breeding philosophy as Jeff. In 1990, Carl moved the Rocky Side herd to Bedford County.

A well-respected dairyman, Carl died tragically in a farming accident. And the herd was dispersed in 1993. Of the 146 head cataloged for the sale, 54 head had Excellent or Very Good dams.

Now retired, Yoder enjoys spending time with his children and grandchildren. He couldn't attend last year's convention for his induction because he was in Florida.

The 2000 Distinguished Young Breeder Award winners were also recognized during the annual banquet. David and Martha Poole of Robesonia received this prestigious award.

The Pooles own 175 registered Holsteins on their farm, Fantasyland Holsteins. The herd has a rolling herd average of 29,853 pounds milk, 1,015 pounds fat, and 955 pounds protein with a BAA of 107. The Pooles are expanding from 90 milking cows with a goal of 300.

The Pooles are very active in their local Holstein club, helping with both senior and junior activities. David has volunteered as coach of the Berks County dairy judging team, and Martha has served as a 4-H leader for six years.

The Pooles have received various honors with their Holsteins, both in the show ring and through marketing genetics. According to Pa. Holstein Association President James Burdette, registered Holsteins have a bright future at Fantasyland Holsteins.

During the annual banquet, Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Lori Connelly talked about her involvement in the Junior Holstein Association and the role that the association has played in her life. She also commended Holstein breeders on their dedication to producing an excellent cow.

James Burdette was presented with a pin for serving as the 1999-2000 president during the banquet. Heidi and Holly Miller, granddaughters of Paul Miller, sang the invocation before the dinner.

NFO Asks Glickman To Help America's Dairy Farmers

AMES, Iowa–As America's dairy farmers continue receiving pay prices at 1978 levels, a major farm group is formally requesting the Secretary of Agriculture to temporarily floor class III milk prices at $13.50. Class III base prices currently hover near $9.50 per one hundred pounds (cwt.) of milk; just one year ago farmers earned $17.34/cwt.

National Farmers Organization members passed the milk floor price resolution at it's national convention in mid January. NFO leaders are calling on farm organizations and other dairy industry groups to join in the effort for the temporary six-month action in all federal milk marketing orders.

"Because dairy farmers' milk production costs greatly exceed the prices they currently receive, many are suffering severe financial loss and are leaving the business," said National Farmers Organization president Paul Olson, a dairy producer from Wisconsin.

"To realize the severe hardship we face, Congress and Secretary Glickman only need to remember the salary they earned 22 years ago, and then imagine trying to pay business and living expenses using that salary."

The federal government reports that once total economic expenses are computed, it costs dairymen nationally an average $17.33 per cwt. to produce milk for U.S. consumers. Their total cash expenses average $12.72. The higher figure represents labor and management costs, and the overall return on investment.

Versus one year ago, most dairy producers are receiving $7.71 cwt. less for the base price of their milk. Which means a 100-cow herd generates approximately $14,000 less for each month's production.

"Low milk prices place dairy farmers in a cruel cost-price squeeze," said Olson. "Without some type of price relief, increasingly large numbers of dairy farms will face bankruptcy and financial ruin."

The Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act, which establishes federal rules for milk production and sales, specifically calls for orderly marketing conditions and price stability, which is in the best interest of producers and consumers. Unreasonable fluctuations in prices and supplies, along with orderly milk flow are key points in federal milk market regulation.

"We urge Secretary Glickman to act swiftly and set a temporary floor price of $13.50 to protect America's hard working dairy producers that provide the quality milk that every citizen depends upon."

Marketing Livestock Products Workshop

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.)– Penn State Cooperative Extension will host a Marketing Livestock Products Workshop at the Cambria County Extension Office in Ebensburg on March 21, 2000 from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

"Market prices for livestock have been pretty low for the past several years, so livestock producers are looking for new ways to market their livestock or products made from the livestock," said Melanie Barkley, Bedford County Extension Agent.

This workshop is designed to give producers some ideas on how and where to market products they produce from their livestock. The workshop will cover how to develop a business plan for marketing livestock products, marketing examples, value added products, understanding consumer preferences, and marketing brainstorming.

"By selling products directly to consumers, livestock producers can increase their profit potential," said Barkley.

For more information you can contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Bedford County at (814) 623-4800 or in Cambria County at (814) 472-7986. Cost for the workshop is $10.00. The fee includes materials and lunch.

Low Milk Prices Spark Frustration Among Pennsylvania Dairy Farmers

Lehan R. Power, Director
Bradford Co. Extension

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.)–Dairy farmers across the state are struggling with record low prices for their milk, and some are blaming the nation's milk pricing system. But an expert from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says the expanded milk production in Western states, not a new price system, is the reason for low prices.

"Farmers received very high milk prices in 1998 and 1999," says Kenneth Bailey, associate professor of agricultural economics. "They responded by expanding milk production–especially in Western states. Some states, such as California, New Mexico and Idaho, saw growth rates of 10 to 15 percent. But in Pennsylvania, milk production grew less than one percent in 1999."

Milk prices, which started this year at record lows, could stay depressed for four or five months, Bailey says. "In many cases, prices will be below the cost of production for Pennsylvania dairy farmers," he says. "Unfortunately, prices are declining just as a new method of national milk pricing is coming in, and some dairy farmers may see the new system as the reason for their problems."

Effective Jan. 1, 2000, the U.S. Department of Agriculture instituted a major overhaul of the 60-year-old federal milk marketing order program. The overhaul will streamline and improve the nation's wholesale milk pricing system by tying prices more closely to commodity prices for butter, cheese and powdered milk. Unfortunately, Bailey explains, the new order reforms coincide with record low wholesale prices for cheese and butter. Beleaguered dairy farmers from Pennsylvania and other states recently protested outside the Maryland Statehouse for fairness in milk pricing.

"But milk prices would be low whether or not we had order reform," Bailey explains. "The cause of these low milk prices is basically supply and demand. All of that excess milk production had to go somewhere; it went into cheese vats. Cheese production in 1999 grew 6 percent over a year ago. In the West, cheese production grew 12 percent. Demand, however, has been relatively steady. As a result, cheese stocks in public warehouses were up 10 percent at the end of December, and are growing."

Inflated cheese stocks will keep milk prices low, Bailey says, until the milk glut passes through the nation's system. Dairy farmers have no choice but to wait out the low prices.

"Farmers I've talked with are frustrated with these low prices, especially when everyone else is benefiting from a strong national economy," Bailey says. "Expansion in Western states should slow down this year. In the meantime, Pennsylvania dairy farmers will have to try to ride out the storm. Milk prices will be better in the spring."

Bailey suggests that farmers consider "forward contracting" on milk prices with dairy cooperatives if they can lock in a fair price. Right now those opportunities are limited. Farmers also should budget their monthly income and expenses for the year. That's especially important when prices are low. Farmers also can try to lock in other costs, such as feed concentrates, interest rates and fuel costs, if they are reasonable.

Dairy farmers can find useful financial planning strategies, up-to-date forecasts and a budgeting model for projecting the year's income at Penn State's Dairy Outlook site on the World Wide Web at http://www.aers.psu.edu/DairyOutlook/.

"We're coming up with new things for the Web site–new tools that I think will help dairy farmers," Bailey says. "We're going to be training cooperative extension agents with a spreadsheet that helps farmers to budget their income. We also have projections on what milk prices will be for six marketing areas in Pennsylvania for 2000.

"It's very important that Pennsylvania farmers understand what causes their milk prices to fluctuate each month. With these tools, farmers will be able to sit down with their Penn State Cooperative Extension agent and plan out their cash flow."

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

or 0.9 percent from a year ago, and up 6,000 head from December 1999.

Milk production in January grew just about everywhere (see Table 3). Of course the West was up: Arizona up 9.1 percent, California up 11.0 percent, Idaho up 14.5 percent, and New Mexico up 10.2 percent. Several other states were also up: Indiana up 6.5 percent, Kentucky up 3.5 percent, Michigan up 8.1 percent, Pennsylvania up 3.1 percent, Texas up 4.4 percent, and Virginia up 5.1 percent.

All this extra milk appears to be moving into the production of butter, nonfat dry milk, and cheese. That is resulting in greater growth in stocks of dairy products. The Cold Storage Report (see Table 4) indicates that butter stocks grew from 25.1 million pounds on December 31, 1999 to 79.1 million pounds by January 31, 2000. Butter stocks in January grew 30.1 percent from a year ago Stocks of American cheese grew from 458.0 million pounds in December 31, 1999 to 481.1 million pounds by January 31, 2000. =

American cheese stocks in January grew 6.4 percent over a year ago. Total cheese stocks grew 7.5 percent in January over a year ago.

It is normal to see stocks of dairy products grow in January since there is a lot of extra milk available, particularly cream. Many butter processors build inventory this time of year since they don't have to compete for available cream supplies from ice cream makers. Growth in the milk supply, however, is adding to greater levels of dairy product production.

The markets for dairy commodities remained depressed this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Barrel prices showed some strength, rising from $1.08 per pound on Monday, February 14 to $1.10 per pound by Friday, February 18. Prices for 40-pound blocks fluctuated between $1.11 and $1.1050 per pound Grade AA butter rose from $0.8750 per pound on Monday to $0.9100 by Friday. This rise in price is unusual given the strong growth in butter stocks. According to USDA, "producers and handlers are once again questioning whether price firmness is being influenced by factors other than supply/demand."

The Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) purchased 11,358,551 pounds of nonfortified nonfat dry milk and 235,694 pounds of fortified nonfat dry milk during the week of February 14-18 from the West and Midwest under the dairy price support program. No cheese was purchased this week.

The Class III milk futures at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange settled at the following prices as of February 18, 2000: February--$9.60; March--$9.82; April--$9.99; May--$10.10; June--$10.85; July--$11 70; August--$12.25; September--$12.39; October--$12.50; November--$12.20; and December--$12.05.

Finally, USDA announced the advanced prices and Class I and II prices for March 2000 for all federal orders. The two-week average commodity prices applicable for March were: butter--$0.9105 per pound; nonfat dry milk--$1.0104; cheese--$1.1084; and dry whey--$0.1800. The base price for Class I milk is $10.84 per cwt and is $0.13 per cwt higher than the February price. Class I differentials are added to the base price to form the Class I price. The March base price for Class I milk is derived from the advanced Class IV skim milk pricing factor of $7.71 per cwt and the advanced butterfat pricing factor of $0.9713 per pound. The Class II skim milk price for March is $8.41 per cwt and the Class II nonfat solids price is $0.9344 per pound. The complete Class II price will be available in early April.

Dairy Employee Milker's Training

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.)–Area dairy producers are encouraged to enroll employees responsible for milking in an upcoming dairy employee milker's training planned for Thursday, March 16th. The session is a Pennsylvania Dairy Alliance program coordinated by the Capital Regional Extension Dairy Team.

During the morning session, Dr. Jerry Jones, extension dairy scientist in milk quality and milking management from Virginia Tech will discuss proper milking procedures, mastitis detection, and producing high quality milk. Extension Agents Phil Wagner, Franklin County, and Galen Kopp, Lebanon County, will help instruct the milking management program. Registration for the milker's school begins at 9:30 a.m. The program starts at 9:45 a.m. and runs till 3:30 p.m.

Because it is important to handle cows calmly and quietly when moving them to and from the milking center, the afternoon program will focus on safe animal handling. Proper animal restraint and treatment will also be addressed. Animal treatment areas are frequently located next to the milking center and milking employees often have cow treatment responsibilities, so this topic will help emphasize the need to handle animals safely. Dan McFarland, multi-county agricultural engineering agent, will provide instruction for the animal handling segment.

The milker's training will be held at Slate Ridge Farm at 5425 Lincoln Way West in St. Thomas, Pennsylvania. Dennis Peckman and family will be hosting the meeting. Directions to the farm are as follows: Take Exit 6 off I-81 at Chambersburg. This is the route 30 exit. Proceed west on Route 30 for seven miles to the farm. The farm is on right side of the road. The farm name is on the sign at the entrance to the dairy.

Cost for the training including the lunch fee is $25 per participant. The session is limited to the first thirty people who apply. To register for the training, please call the Penn State Cooperative Extension Customer Service Desk at the York County Office (717-840-7408). You may also fax your registration to 717-755-5968 or email to Tim Beck at (tbeck@psu.edu). Registration is requested by March 6, 2000, so adequate materials may be prepared for the sessions.

Pennsylvania DHIA Honors

get involved.

"We always knew that Wayne County would have a full delegation at different meetings," said Castrogiovanni. "Ellis was always willing to step in and help out whenever he was needed."

This year's somatic cell award went to Greg and Sheryl Seeley of Bradford County. Their herd had the lowest somatic cell count average in Pennsylvania for 1999. That rolling average was 51,000 somatic cells.

The first placed winners of the 1999 Pennsylvania DHIA Herd Management Awards in each breed were awarded a certificate and putter plate with their name and a dairy farm scene engraved on it.

To qualify for the herd management award, herds must be on an official record program and have at least 10 cow years and 10 test for the most recent cow year. The top three herds in each breed that has 20 or more official herds enrolled were recognized at the banquet.

This year's winners in the Holstein breed were as follows: First place went to Junge Farms, Inc. (Ray Moyer) from Berks County with a score of 170 points. Second place was awarded to Loundondale Farms in Jefferson County with a score of 152 points. Two farms tied for third place. Those were Buff Run Farm and Rufus B. Martin, both from Union County and both scoring 151 points.

In the Guernsey breed, Rutter Brothers of York County took first place with a score of 99 points. Thomas E. Walker of Somerset County was awarded second place with 76 points. From Washington County, John and J.E. Marcheszak received third place with 67 points.

Wester Jersey Farm from Mercer County received first place in the Jersey breed with 121 points. Second place went to Blair and Cammy Yurkanin from Bradford County, who received 93 points. Third was awarded to Wayne and Rita Shaffer from Jefferson County with 89 points.

In the mixed breeds category, Locust-Ridge Farm from Union County received first place with 139 points. James and Judith Larson from McKean County received second with 128 points. Third place went to Du Valley Farms of Fulton County with 113 points.

Don Gable of Chester County received first place in the Ayrshire breed with a total of 82 points. Dean E. Varner from Huntingdon County received second with 80 points. Third place went to Hidden Valley Ayrshires of Adams County, which scored 73 points.

In the Brown Swiss breed, Little-Hill Farm of Lebanon County took first place with 98 points. Minor Brothers Swiss from Mercer County received second place with 93 points. Third place honors went to Elm Brook Yurkanins of Bradford County with 89 points.

In the goat category, Douglas Newbold of Chester County received first with 28 points. Second went to Sindi and Arch Michalik of Montgomery County with 26 points. Torrison and Churchill of Montgomery County received third with 20 points.

Other highlights of the meeting included a presentation from Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess Amanda Gilkinson. She spoke about being a farmer's daughter and talked about all of the opportunities growing up on a farm has opened up to her. She also talked about the closeness of her family and the values that she has learned by living on the farm.

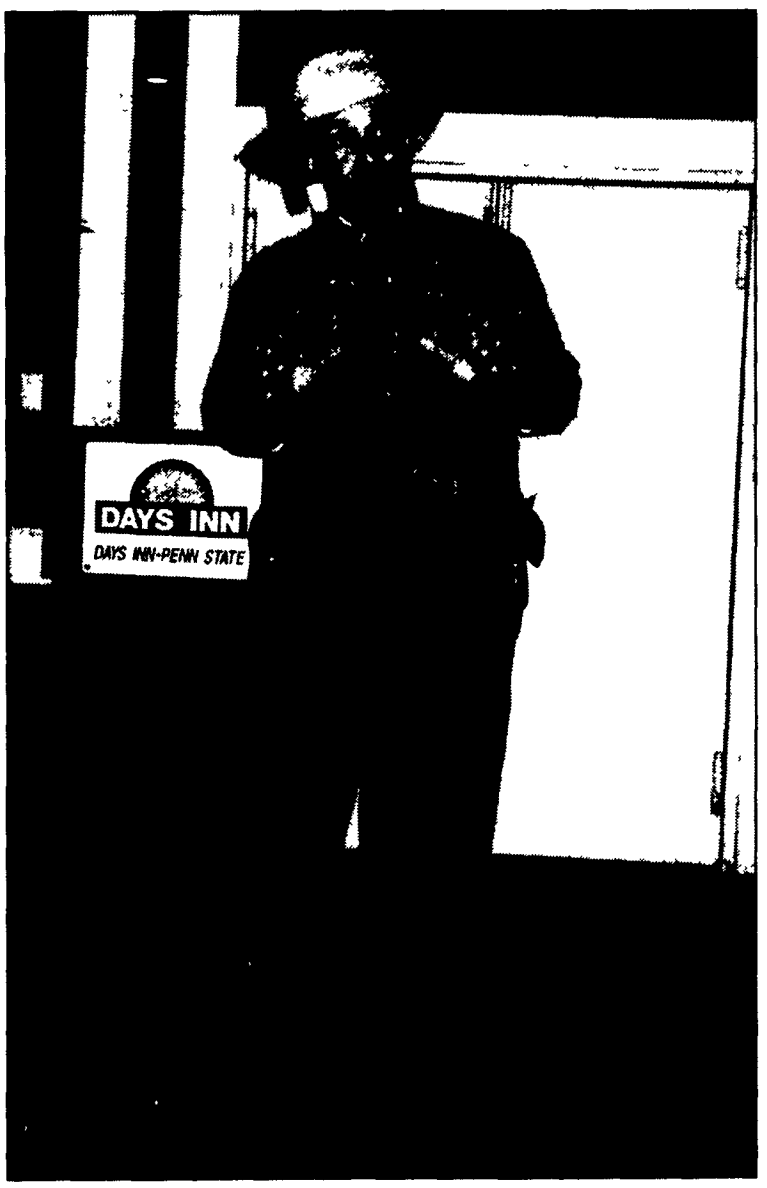
Cindy Weimer, industry relations manager for the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, also spoke during the meeting. She highlighted the newest promotion activities, including a school milk campaign called "Operation Cold Milk," which provides coolers to schools with warm milk problems. She reviewed the latest dairy advertising campaigns and show slides from the newest "got milk?" and "Behold The Power Of Cheese" commercials.

John Robinson, a dairy farmer from Mifflinburg, was the master of ceremonies during the evening.

In his closing comments, Robinson challenged farmers to break out of society's sterotype and show people that they are businesspersons, not dressed in overalls, and they are happy with what they're doing. He also encouraged the audience to develop a positive mindset, set goals, and be willing to change. Robinson is a graduate of the Dale Carnegie Human Relations Course.

About 55 people attended the banquet, which was held as part of the Pennsylvania DHIA's Annual Meeting in State

Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess Amanda Gilkinson served milk punch during the social hour. She also gave a speech during the banquet about being a dairy farmer's daughter.



During his inspirational closing remarks, Mifflinburg dairy producer John Rodgers encouraged DHIA banquet attendees to break the sterotype that society has for dairy farmers and become businesspersons willing to take risks, accept challenges, and keep a positive attitude.

Collegiate Clubs As Partners In Youth Education

Dale Olver
Dairy and Animal Science
Penn State

Collegiate clubs can be effective partners in youth educational activities. At Penn State, the three clubs sponsored by the Department of Dairy and Animal Science -- the Penn State Dairy Science Club, the Penn State Block and Bridle Club and Students for the Responsible Use of Animals (SRUA) -- have embraced opportunities to work with young people in cooperation with industry groups and extension personnel. Clubs can combine enthusiasm, personnel, and organization with extension and industry guidance, expertise, and financial support to provide exciting programs

An excellent example of these partnership opportunities is the Pennsylvania Junior All-Breeds Convention. The first convention was held at State College in 1996, and it has since become an annual event. The planning committee includes Penn State Dairy Science Club members and extension personnel. Youth from junior breed associations also provide input for workshops and activities. Teamwork and cooperation are stressed throughout the weekend. Educational sessions are conducted by faculty members, graduate students, industry personnel, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess royalty.

Recent topics have included pedigree evaluation, rumen development, reproductive management, semen evaluation, in-vitro fertilization, forage quality, and effective use of the World-Wide Web. Workshops are hands-on, and group sizes are limited to 15-20 persons per group. Social activities and tours add variety to the program.

Breed associations provide pedigrees for a "mock sale" where teams compete to make judicious purchases from the sale "consignments". A registration fee covers meals, and industry contributions help defray workshop costs and other convention expenses.

The Pennsylvania Holstein Quiz Bowl is a partnership between the Pennsylvania Holstein Association (PHA) and the Dairy Science Club. Approximately 30 teams compete each year, and Pennsylvania teams have won at least eight national Holstein championships since 1989. PHA and Dairy Science Club have distinct responsibilities in conducting the contest. All entries are submitted to the PHA for acceptance and verification of eligibility. In addition, PHA invites eight judges and solicits awards for winning teams. Dairy Science Club members write questions for the contest (over 500 each year. Students improve their writing and communication skills The Dairy Science Club also assists in selecting Pennsylvania's Guernsey Quiz Bowl teams that have won many national championships

The Penn State Block and Bridle Club has been active in youth education through a number of activities. Club members cooperate in the Pennsylvania Beef Expo by assisting with the Skillathon and with the Beef Quiz Bowl for 4-H and FFA youth. Block and Bridle members also assist with judging contests at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, and they have partnered with the Pennsylvania Beef Council to help assemble educational "Patty Melt" kits distributed to schools.

The third undergraduate club sponsored by the Department of Dairy and Animal Science, Students for the Responsible Use of Animals (SRUA), helps to coordinate the Farm Animal Learning Center at the Pennsylvania Farm Show and assists with exhibits at Ag Progress Days. These exhibits target non-farm youth and receive financial support from industry groups. The club also helps distribute information about animal care and products to elementary schools.

The activities I have listed represent a portion of the ongoing youth education efforts through our collegiate clubs in cooperation with industry. These arrangements reduce duplication of efforts while enhancing educational opportunities for youth. At the same time, club members gain additional), and they also act as moderators, experience in teamwork and communication skills. They also meet industry leaders, prospective students, and potential employers. These partnerships have resulted in successful interactions and increased positive learning opportunities for Pennsylvania youth.

1999-2000 Young Dairy Leaders Complete Leadership Training

The Holstein Foundation reports that young dairy leaders (ages 22-45) from across the United States, and working with all breeds of dairy cattle, completed leadership and communications skills training at workshops held in Tampa, Florida February 2 - 6, 2000. The overall theme of the final phase of training for the 1999-2000 Institute class was fostering unity in the dairy industry.

In addition to developing group leadership and communication skills through experiential learning exercises and formal presentations, participants gained knowledge through workshops on a variety of urgent issues facing the dairy industry including biotechnology and transgenics. Brian Lowry, Director of Industry Affairs and Freedom to Operate for Monsanto's Animal Agriculture Sector and Dr. Thomas Bailey, currently with the College of Veterinary Medicine at Virginia Tech University in the Production Medicine Section, made presentations and engaged in discussion with participants on these topics.

Through participatory mock Senate meetings and a panel discussion with Andrew Meyer, legislative assistant to U.S. Senator James Jeffords (R-VT), Rob Larew, legislative director for U.S. congressman, representative Collin Peterson (D-MN), and Mike Brown, general manager of National All-Jersey, Inc., participants learned about the public policy process and how to influence it.

Participants engaged in panel discussions on board leadership. Dr. Bruce Anderson, professor of business management in the Department of Agricultural, Resource and Managerial Economics at Cornell University led the board leadership training, while Richard Chichester, former CEO of Select Sires and Don Berg, vice president within the Dairy Foods Industrial Division of Land O'Lakes, Inc., represented board and management perspectives on a panel.

Participants engaged in round-table discussions on a variety of topics including consumer demands and consumption, led by Linda Eatherton, vice-president, public and industry relations, Dairy Management, Inc.

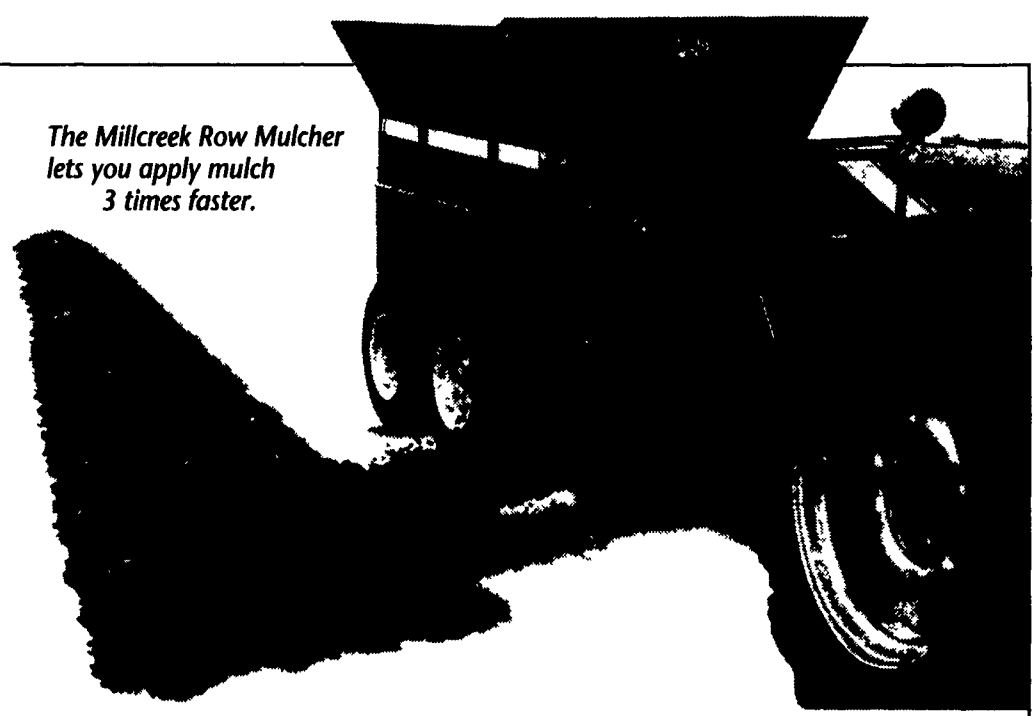
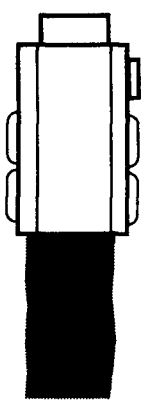
The Millcreek Row Mulcher lets you apply mulch 3 times faster.



Apply compost and organic mulch to any row crop automatically



YOUR CHOICE
Millcreek Row Mulchers also let you drop spread in the center of rows.

From tree fruit to vegetable beds, from bramble crops to vineyards, organic mulch and compost can reduce chemical input for weed suppression, retain soil moisture, and improve soil fertility by adding organic matter to sandy and clay soils.

Now Millcreek eliminates the costly labor needed for organic mulch and compost application. The remarkable new Millcreek Row Mulcher works with all types of organic material, and even lets you adjust the depth and width of the mulch rows from 12" to 120" wide, from 1/2" to 6" deep.

Starting under $6500, no other machine compares when it comes to capabilities, versatility, and cost effectiveness. Rugged construction. Six sizes, from 3.4 to 20 cubic yard capacity. Custom designs. Call today for a free color brochure, or to discuss your specific needs.

Plum Pox

terial. Penn State, along with the state and federal departments of agriculture, has been looking closely at how the virus spreads. Nov. 4 was the last observation of active virus made.

In a survey conducted in Adams County, of 39 samples, 18 were positive in two townships — Latimore and Huntington, near York Springs. A quarantine was established extended to a two-mile radius around the infected zone.

Fortunately, the Strain D virus found tends, noted Hulbrendt, to spread slower with fewer severe symptoms compared with other strains, and does not affect cherry trees.

PPV is spread from aphids, who inject the virus into plants while feeding. They do not pass the PPV onto the progeny.

The quarantine does not extend to the movement of fruit. But no plant material is allowed to leave the quarantined site.

According to an article in the Lancaster Intelligencer Journal, this spring, "front teams" organized by Penn State and the other departments of agriculture will visit tree farms and nurseries to collect information to help stop the virus.

Teams will take leaf samples from trees to be used to test for plum pox. Symptoms don't appear on the trees for two to three years, according to Hulbrendt. That's why testing now is necessary.

Since the outbreak was discovered, 31 states that have received fruit from Pennsylvania requested test kits.

The virus has no ill effects on humans. But the virus leaves lesions on the fruit, making them hard to market.

Adams County is the center of the fruit-growing region in the state. Pennsylvania produces more than $25 million worth of stone fruit each year.

With increasing environmental regulations, growers have been steadily losing selection of materials to fight fruit tree fungus. But some new, potent weapons are undergoing approval or already have been approved for use in orchards.

Travis, Penn State pathologist, spoke about the new "stroby" fungicides available. Stroby, short for Strobilurin, is an antifungal compound originally discovered in a fungus.

The material was discovered in Europe by someone observing pine cones infected with a fungus. The cone was not rotting. Apparently, a substance in the fungus prevented other fungi from developing on the cone.

The stroby fungicides are manufactured by a variety of companies. The fungicides are broad-spectrum, rain-fast, provide systemic activity, and are effective against rusts, scab, and powdery mildew. The only concern Travis and other researchers have is resistance management. Travis said that if the stroby fungicides are overused, "you'll lose them fairly quickly."

There are no phytotoxicity problems.

The key is to apply the fungicides early enough and to carefully watch label rate application.

"If you use them well in your orchard, you'll be able to use them for a long time," Travis said. He also provided information on peach fungicide programs.

Steve Miller, of the Appalachian Fruit Research Station, spoke about the new plant growth regulator (PGR) that may soon be available to growers. The material, with the scientific name prohexadione calcium, inhibits gibberellic acid biosynthesis, "which causes cell elongation," noted Miller.

In other words, the material reduces plant vegetative growth, promoting more fruit development on the plant.

Critical to growers, Miller said, is timing. Timing "is extremely important if you are going to reap the benefits of the material."

Growers must apply the PGR early in the season, at petal fall to 3-inch height, for effective growth control. The material shortens the length of time required to prune trees, reduces the number of primary cuts, and reduces tree canopy, which helps in improving fruit size and quality.

There are also disease benefits using the PGR, according to Miller. Research has noted that the material controls fire blight by reducing the shoot growth, thus reducing the number of fire blight strikes and length of strikes, consistently.

Using the new PGR, there is no reduction in fruit size, fruit firmness, or solids. There are no adverse effects on fruit quality and no carryover even at higher rates. However, the PGR can increase fruit set, requiring an aggressive thinning program, Miller said.

The PGR may be available to growers as early as April this year.

Also at the meeting, Greg Krawczyk, Penn State entomologist, provided details on studies on oriental fruit moth control. He also provided information on managing aphids in fruit trees.

With the use of more selective chemicals for growers, scouting, timing, and application take a greater emphasis, according to the Penn State entomologist.

Tim Elkner, Lancaster horticulture agent, provided information on fine-tuning sprayers. He noted that, according to the New Jersey fruit production guide, 20 percent of seasonal costs are involved in spraying. Proper calibration not only helps get the proper rates of sprays to plants but can "also save you money," he said.

Photoperiod Meeting Set

NEW FRANKLIN (Franklin Co.) - A meeting to discuss photoperiod management is scheduled for March 2, 2000 at the New Franklin Ruritan Community Center. Time is from 9:45 a.m to noon Dr. Geoffrey Dahl, University of Maryland and Dan McFarland, PSU ag engineer will be the featured speakers.

Growing evidence supports the use of photoperiod as a management tool for dairy producers. Photoperiod is the cycle of light and dark periods within a day. Recent research has shown that long days stimulate increased milk production by 6-10 percent in lactating dairy cows.

Pre-registration is not required However, there will be a five-dollar per person (farm) charge at the meeting to help cover the expenses for getting Dr Dahl into the county Multiple people from the same farm do not pay more than the one five-dollar registration

Directions. From I-81 exit 5, follow route 316 SE for two miles to New Franklin. At Arthur's Country Deli, turn left onto New Franklin Road Proceed for the equivalent of one block. Look for the Ruritan Community Center sign and driveway on your right The meeting will take place in the block building.

Bailey Reports On Milk Pricing At Lancaster Dairy Days

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Changes in the milk pricing system and the 22-year low in the on-farm milk price have lots of farmers talking lately. Some even feel like they're in the dark about what's going on.

During Lancaster County's Dairy Day on Tuesday, Dr. Ken Bailey from Penn State shed some light on the situation.

Bailey is the milk marketing and dairy policies specialist for Penn State. Part of his job at Penn State includes objectively analyzing the milk pricing system and what's going on in the milk marketing scene.

According to Bailey, a lot is happening nationally on milk pricing. President Bill Clinton talked about a safety net for family farms in his State of the Union address. Clinton's budget also called for a two-year extension of the milk price support programs.

The Secretary of Agriculture recently held a two-day session with legislators to look at federal marketing orders and how Class III and IV milk prices are formulated. Although a lot of things were discussed during the two-day session, the group didn't come to any conclusions on the situation.

"It's been an interesting week — a lot has been happening, but the current milk pricing system keeps going," said Bailey.

The first question Bailey addressed is why are milk prices so low. "The west is expanding like crazy," said Bailey. "Cheap feed and good milk prices drove the expansion."

"The problem was that there weren't enough people in the west to drink the milk. So they built huge cheese plants and drove cheese stocks up," explained Bailey. "People did eat a lot of cheese last year, which caused stocks to fall at record numbers. But, at the end of the year, they didn't decline enough."

Bailey mentioned that several farmers asked him what they're going to do with $10 milk. "When we talk about $10 milk, we're talking about Class III price," said Bailey. "The farmer's price is going to be higher."

The farmer's milk price is a combination of the farmer's Class III price for butterfat, protein, and other solids, along with the producer price differential, over-order premiums, and quality premiums.

The producer price differential is the adjustment added to the Class III price to account for Class I, II, and IV prices. This price is formulated based on milk delivered in Boston.

Since not all milk is delivered directly to Boston, a location adjustment is made for milk delivered to other areas. Bailey expects farmers in Lancaster will get 35 cents less for their producer price differential than the price set in Boston.

According to Bailey, the benefits of the new milk pricing system include more transparent pricing, more up-to-date pricing, pricing based on components, and no more basic formula price.

"Farmer's milk prices will respond more quickly to changes in the cheese and butter prices than in the past," said Bailey. "If the cheese or the butter prices increase, the higher price will show up the next month in the farmer's milk check."

"Two things you won't find anywhere on your check is the basic formula price and the butterfat differential," said Bailey. "They're gone."

Under the new milk pricing system, several steps occur to come up with the farmer's milk price. The first step is a NASS (National Agricultural Statistics Survey) survey of cheese, butter, nonfat dry milk, and whey prices.

The next step uses the NASS weekly dairy product prices to compute advanced prices for Class I and Class II milk. Computing the other class prices is the next step.

"The farmers don't need to know what the Class I, II, III, and IV milk prices are," said Bailey. "But the market administrator and cooperatives need to know what these prices are to compute the producer price differential."

The fourth step is computing the pool value of the milk, which is the producer price differential. This takes the price at the federal level and brings it down to the local federal order.

The fifth step involves taking the federal order price and adjusting it to where the farmer's milk is delivered. This is when the location adjustment is established.

The final step is computing the farm price. Every farmer's price will differ based on the components in his milk. Farmers with higher fat, protein, and other solids will receive a higher

Question: We keep our feeding program the same throughout the year but in late summer, our butterfat hits a yearly low and continues into early fall. What can we do?

This is the most asked question since summer. Payment emphasis has been on fat more now than at any other time in history. Many of the dairymen that I talk to feel that their cows have dropped no less than five points in the last several months. They are looking at past fall and winter production and know that these same fat prices during those times can represent quite a bit of added income. Will these prices hold? Your guess is as good as mine. The average herd in Pennsylvania with a five-point drop in percent butterfat during June, July, August, and September lost about $5,500 in potential income. This is not exactly correct because the same reasons for the drop in butterfat during these months are also the same reasons we get slightly higher milk yields. Let us discuss the causes of this and decide if we can achieve a reasonable tradeoff.

First we need to examine the statement made about this particular herd and its non-changing feed program. With the information that was gathered we see that these cows are being fed the same this fall as last. Corn silage, hay crop silage, hi-moisture corn, protein concentrate, and hay make up the diet year-round. Careful consideration has been given to macro and micro nutrient balance. This seems like a diet that is well balanced and deserving to be put in front of any cow yet there is a reason that we should examine what the cows tell us and not what the ration spreadsheet says. In this case, I am quite certain we are looking at one of the most common mistakes made in trying to feed our herds — the paper diet is not the one the cow is consuming.

Further study into what this herd is eating tells us why there is a butterfat problem. Cows are housed in the barn at night and are fed cafeteria style according to the formulated ration. During the day, they are haylage feed which happens to be round bale silage. The mistake made was to assume dry matter intake remained the same during the past few months. With no known way to measure the haylage consumed outside, there can be a large shift in the amount of fiber consumed from forage. While inside the barn, the cows eat everything except a portion of their long hay and the problem now becomes compounded. How do we correct this? In my experience, it is better to guess the DMI too low than too high. Rumen health will suffer and lead to other problems when a diet gets out of balance from a fiber standpoint for more than just a short time. When we cannot measure what the cows are eating, we must make an educated guess about DMI.

Your cows will tell you when you feed them correctly. Use your DHIA records along with on-the-farm indicators such as manure scoring, body condition scoring and DMI to adjust diets to maintain proper rumen health. This will serve you and your cows well and give you the opportunity to enjoy some of that $5,500 worth of lost opportunity.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Freestall And Bedding Management Discussed At Recent Conference

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A cow's production and longevity can be greatly affected by where she chooses to lie down.

Animals will choose the most comfortable place to lie down. If the stall isn't cushioned enough or if it's difficult to get into, a cow will choose the manure over the stall.

Lying in the manure can cause mastitis, leading to high somatic cell counts, higher vet bills, and more cull cow incidents.

If a cow does lie down in a stall that isn't properly designed, she can end up with swollen hocks, bruised shoulders, and other injuries that hurt her longevity.

Speakers during the afternoon session at the recent Dairy Animal Housing Conference addressed considerations in freestall design and bedding decisions and their impact on cow comfort.

Those speakers included William Bickert, Jack Rodenburg, Richard Stowell, Dan McFarland, K. Larry Smith, Charles Guard III, and Curt Gooch.

Virtually everything in dairy freestall design has changed in the past 20 years, according to the panel.

"Cow comfort has become a major issue driving the evolution of attitude about barn design," said Rodenburg . "Your choice in stall design reflects your management style and goals. It has also has a major impact on manure handling and design."

The panel encouraged farmers to evaluate cow stress and cow comfort in their herd and make sure that the freestall design encouraged cows to lie down at least 10 to 14 hours a day.

"Lying down on the job promotes cud chewing, increases blood flow, increases growth hormone, decreases cortisol, and causes less feet and leg problems," said Rodenburg.

The panel emphasized that compromises are inevitable in farm price than farmers with lower component levels.

The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board also sets minimum price levels and over order premiums that are taken into consideration on the milk check.

"The best thing about the new milk pricing system is that components matter a lot," said Bailey. "Farmers with higher butterfat, protein, and other solids will get higher prices."

While Bailey does think the new milk pricing system is working well, he does expect that milk prices will be low for the next four to five months.

"What can farmers do? They can either get mad or work with the market," said Bailey.

He encourages farmers to budget their income and expenses, forward contract their milk price when the price is good, lock in their feed and other costs, apply for better financing, feed for components and value, and manage production and expenses. These suggestions will help them maintain profitability when the price falls.

freestall and bedding choices.

"You have to make choices," said Stowell. "You need to assure cleanliness, optimal provide cow comfort, and make considerations for your manure system."

The panel identified eight feet as the minimum amount of space needed in a stall to allow for cow movement, emphasizing that a lunging area was needed to allow the cow to lunge forward. The standard width of a freestall should be 48 inches for a mature Holstein cow.

The brisket board should allow the cow to stand comfortably, but discourage forward movement and encourage the animal to lie square. Animals that don't lie square are more susceptible to dirty udders and udder injuries.

According to McFarland, the freestall design should do four things — be comfort, promote cleanliness, promote good udder health, and prevent injury. Cows should spend 10 to 14 hours a day lying down. And they should do that in about six bouts during the day.

"Cows are going to lie down anyway they can to get up easily," said McFarland. "Most people buy bedding based on whatever is most plentiful and whatever is least expensive. But nobody ever went broke buying bedding."

The panel emphasized that the general requirements for freestalls are clean, dry, and comfortable. Cleanliness is promoted by using inorganic material such as sand and cleaning the stalls regularly. Cow comfort is promoted by using soft bedding at least four to eight inches thick.

During the session, Rodenburg went over a study of different types of bedding and their impact on cow comfort. The study showed that softer areas promoted ease of movement, which stimulated more up and down movement and more frequent trips to the manager.

While the research showed that the cows like lying down on mattresses, the difference in the time cows spent lying down in sand-bedded stalls and the time they spent lying in stalls with mattresses was minimal. Sand bedded cows also had less hock injuries.

The panel agreed that sand was the most ideal type of bedding. It does double duty, providing a cushioning layer and a clean, dry, and giving surface.

The negative aspect of sands was its impact on manure systems. Stalls that use sand should have eight inches of sand in the resting area, should accommodate the brisket board, and should include a 4 percent slope.

For planning estimates, a farmer should allow for five cubic yards per stall per year and 40 pounds of sand per stall per day.

Although the speakers did feel sand was the most appropriate choice of bedding, they cautioned that it was not a cure all.

Proper design and maintenance were essential. The stalls should be cleaned three times a day. They also recommended that sand should be washed, graded, and allowed to dry before it is used in the stalls.

According to Smith, the reasons a farmer should worry about bedding material and its impact on herd health is because the bedding material has frequent contact with the teat end.

Inorganic material such as sand encourages less environmental bacteria like coliform. In research studies, organic bedded cows always have more clinical mastitis, which is often caused by environmental pathogens.

These bacteria need food, moisture, and heat. The organic bedding like sawdust or straw provides the food, while moisture and heat are often readily available, especially in the summertime.

Smith gave these management recommendations for farmers who want to use organic bedding. It must be very dry, should be replaced often, and should include the additional of lime or chemicals to inhibit bacteria growth.

This is just some of the information that these speakers discussed during the freestall and bedding management session of the Dairy Housing Conference.

The Conference was sponsored by the Natural Resource and Agriculture Engineering Service (NRAES), a branch of extension funded by fourteen landgrant universities. NRAES sponsored the conference based on suggestions from dairy farmers and researches.

Lackawanna/Wyoming County Holstein Club Recognizes Herb Steele

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — The Lackawanna/Wyoming County Holstein Club recently honored Herbert Steele of Tunkhannock with the club's 2000 Hall of Fame award.

The prestigious award was given during the club's annual meeting, held on January 29 at the Meshoppen Methodist Church.

Club member Robert Parr presented the award to Steele, recognizing him for his many accomplishments.

Steele has been worked in the A.I. industry since 1953 and is employed by Taurus Services, Inc.

After Parr presented the award, Dick Witter, president of Taurus Services, presented a brief history on Steele.

According to Witter, "Herb Steele was one of the true pioneers in AI."

After graduating, Steele worked as a DHI milk tester in Susquehanna County. He started out in the AI industry working at Woodbourne Farm, owned by Norris Earnshaw. Steele handled the farm's paperwork and developed AI in the area.

In 1953, he began working at Broome-Tioga ABC as an A.I. technician. At one point he managed Louden Hill Farms, another operation owned by Earnshaw.

Steele also developed an insemination business called Golden Genes with Woodborne and Pineyhill Farms in New Jersey. The business used fresh semen from Woodbourne Sires and NYABC bulls.

Steele was employed by Genex and its predecessors, Broome-Tioga ABC, NYABC, and Eastern A.I., for 25 years before leaving in 1978.

In the 1960's, he was one of the highest volume technicians in the industry, earning five high sales awards from Eastern during his career. He also earned the Quarter Century award and the prestigious 100,000-cow award from the National Association of Animal Breeders in 1978.

"Herb always treated his customers with great respect and helped many become very successful," said Witter.

In 1971, Steele joined Witter and Paul Dann to form Taurus Services, Inc. Steele continues to work with Taurus Services as a representative serving nine counties in northeast Pennsylvania and does quality control semen evaluation in the Taurus lab.

"He is a true friend to many," said Witter. "If Herb says something, you better listen because it comes after much thought and will always be good advice."

Steele and his wife Leola live in Bradford County on the farm where he grew up. They have three grown children, Randy, Sally, and Susan.

Steele is the chairman of the Wyoming County Dairy Show Committee and a founder and the co-chairman of the Northern Tier Championship Holstein Show.

Steele's name will appear on a plaque kept in the Wyoming County Extension Office as the 2000 Hall of Fame award recipient. His name will join the ranks of past Hall of Fame winners, including Clifford Sands, Robert Parr, Donald Barth, Murry Fiske, Elwood White, and Wayne Sherwood. Steele was also presented a wall clock from Roger Sherwood, President of the Holstein Club.

Other activities during the Holstein Association's annual meeting including a dinner served to a record crowd followed by a short business meeting.

Bruce Besee, a retired dairyman from Ulster, gave a short slide presentation on farming in Scotland and the Shetland Islands

Harvatine Awarded CME Scholarship

Kevin Harvatine

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)–Kevin Harvatine, a junior in animal sciences at Penn State University, is one of 16 recipients nationwide of a $1,200 scholarship from the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The scholarships were awarded to students who intend to pursue a career in the beef industry and who represent future industry leaders. Award recipients must be enrolled as undergraduates in the College of Agriculture at a four-year institution. They are selected based on a written essay discussing an issue confronting the beef industry and offering solutions.

The title of Harvatine's essay was "Marketing Based Management," which described focusing the industry on a strategy based on "maximizing long term profits by satisfying consumer needs at a profit."

Harvatine, the son of Paul and Susan Harvatine, Thompson, Susquehanna County, is active in many extracurricular activities in the Department of Dairy & Animal Science and the College of Agriculture Sciences while consistently attaining Dean's List. Committees and activities in the Block and Bridle Club, Dairy Science Club, and Ag Advocates take up a large portion of his time, along with being a past officer in Alpha Zeta, an honorary agricultural fraternity.

Harvatine also participates in undergraduate research and is working on an independent research project that he will present at the summer meeting of the American Dairy Science Association. His future plans include a career in an agricultural support industry where he can help producers remain profitable and competitive.

Bradford-Sullivan Farm Bureau

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.)–James Vanblarcom, a Bradford County dairyman and president of the Bradford-Sullivan County Farm Bureau will be speaking at 7 p.m. on March 3 at Towanda High School on the issue of deer management. Vanblarcom will share his experiences with deer management on his farm. This is one of 50 public meetings, hosted by the Pennsylvania Game Commission's Deer Management Supervisor Dr. Gary Alt, taking place across the state in the next few months.

"I am pleased with the steps being made toward a science-based deer management program," said Vanblarcom. "Since assuming the position of Deer Management Supervisor last year, Dr. Alt has really helped bring the issue of deer management to the forefront."

If you would like to attend this meeting and need more information please call Bill Bower at 570-297-2509. All Pennsylvania sportsmen and farmers should be sure to attend one of these meetings in their area.

Potatoes
America's Favorite Vegetable

No doubt about it — America's favorite vegetable is the potato.

It's the vegetable your mother didn't need to coax you to eat.

From side dishes, to snacks, to entrees, potatoes offer unlimited possibilities.

The scoop on the spud is this: They're virtually free of fat, sodium, and cholesterol, only about 120 calories each, and packed with potassium and vitamin C.

When baked, broiled, boiled, roasted or even grilled, potatoes can still be low in fat and colories, but high in flavor and energy.

Seasonings and flavorings are perfect partners for potatoes. Here are some versatile recipes to get you started.

MUSTARD POTATOES

8-9 potatoes, peeled, diced
1 small onion, chopped
2½ cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons ground mustard
2 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese

In a greased 13x9-inch baking dish, combine potatoes, [illegible] onion. Mix remaining [illegible] ients; pour over potatoes. [illegible] uncovered at 350 degrees for [illegible] hour or until potatoes are tender.

The average American eats more than 124 pounds of potatoes annually. The part of the potato we eat grows underground, but it is not a root. The potato is an enlarged part of an underground stem known as the tuber. If allowed to sprout, the potato can grown many new tubers each year.

The potato is so versatile that it lends itself to a variety of creative recipes that are fun, economical, and delicious to taste. Although French fries top the list of favorites, many other ways to prepare a potato exist. Bake it, boil it, grill it, freeze it, fry it, hash it or mash it to prepare dishes for every occasion.

Today's feature is a novel recipe for potato salad, which is easy and tasty when baked in the oven.

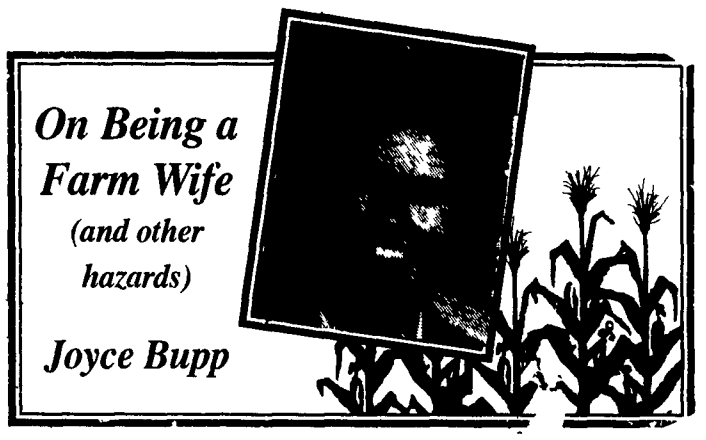
NEW HOLLAND Credit Company



Here we go again.

Maybe.

The world did not shut down at 12:01 a.m. on this past January 1. Computer networks did not roll over and go belly up. Banks did not lose all our money (or debt data), credit cards charged on, and the phones kept ringing off the hook.

Fact is, the whole Y2K thing turned out to be mostly one big yawn. Except for some government defense and spy technology. Which, fortunately, the hackers didn't know about until later.

Or maybe they did. It didn't seem to matter.

So here we go again.

Maybe.

Because Sadie Hawkin's Day is coming up.

You know. Said Hawkin's Day. February 29. The Leap Year calendar catchup. Even in our long-esteemed, down-to-a-nano-second practice of keeping time, every fourth year we have this extra day that has to be tucked in to even everything out.

Sadie Hawkin's Day, by the way, is the traditional day on which women are allowed to openly pursue men, a role reversal of the old-standard, male-pursue-female behavior. Sadie Hawkins, I think, was a man-chasing character from the Li'l Abner comic strip. (If that's wrong, someone with a better memory will update me.) But I don't know the exact tie between the comic character and February 29.

No, you probably won't find Sadie Hawkins Day listed on the February calendar, unless you have one of those off-the-wall ones which keep track of observations like National Pickle Day or Don't Forget To Floss Month.

Not that it probably matters any more. Or, that anyone even cares.

More likely, in this Leap Year 2000, we're going to be uptight one more time over possible observation of Will You Computer Fail This Time? day. For awhile, those same computer consultants who ranted and raved about Y2K, while making megabucks selling correction software, were chanting the same thing about the first Leap Year day of the millennium.

Our PC rolled over to the new century with nary a hiccup on the stroke of midnight as the last one bid farewell. So, I haven't worried that it will somehow mislay this February's extra day. And if it does, does it matter if my checks for that day are dated February 28?

(I guess it would matter if you had a gazillion bucks sitting in some investment fund and missed a day's interest, but somehow I can't get too uptight about that.)

Why, though, when this day only comes every four years, don't we observe some really unique celebration? Why not set it off the calendar completely? Just shut down for the day. Monday would be February 28 and Tuesday would be March 1. And February 29 would be Worldwide Non-Day Day.

We could take those 24 hours and sleep in. Visit with our families. Play with the dog and cat. Kind of like an international "snow" day. Without having to run to the supermarket for milk and bread ahead of time.

No meetings or conference calls. No cell phones. No traffic jams, no music lessons, no team practices. No malls open. No mass transit. No bills. No telemarketers. Boggles the mind, just to think about it.

Only critical emergency services would be acceptable business functions. Stores would close. Electronic mass media would go blank. No computers, no internet, FAXs or pagers, unless strictly personal. (Let's not get totally carried away and do away with power, heat, or running water.)

Basically, the day that normally doesn't exist, wouldn't this year, either. Think we could handle 24 hours of very basic simplicity of life, without going stir crazy?

A small personal problem with this whole concept, however.

How do I convince the cows to go along with it.

Wood Stove Safety

With a few more weeks of winter remaining, wood burning stoves will still be in full force. Every year there are many unexpected fires, property damage claims, and personal injuries associated with wood burning stove use.

Most problems occur due to carelessness, lack of proper information and poor. maintenance and inspections. The following ten safety suggestions may help reduce possible dangers:

1) Burn dry seasoned wood, which produces more heat and also prevents soot (creosote) buildup. Flue vents should be inspected according to manufacturer guidelines, and cleaned as appropriate by a qualified individual.

2) Keep the area around the heating unit and flue clear.

3) Keep a fire extinguisher in a central location known to all household members. Be certain that it is in good working order and that everyone knows how to operate it.

4) Place smoker detectors throughout the house (at least one in the room containing the wood stove) and test regularly.

5) Children must be supervised at all times when using wood stoves.

6) Other household venting appliances (down draft exhaust fans) can diminish proper venting of your wood stove, causing possible smoke damage. During appliance installation, test all other appliances (bathroom fans, stovetop venting, HVAC units, etc.) to ensure that they don't interfere with proper stove venting.

7) Wood stoves should be safety tested and bear a label from a recognized authority such as a testing lab (UL) or building code group (NFPA).

8) To start a fire in your wood stove; crumple up paper on the stove floor and cover with small kindling. Open the draft-/damper fully and light. Hold the door sightly ajar for a few minutes and then close tightly. Once the wood is burning brightly, add additional dry seasoned wood to the fire. Use the draft control to adjust the burn rate. Never light or rekindle a fire with kerosene, gasoline, or charcoal lighter fluid.

9) When re-fueling, open the door slowly to prevent smoke spillage.

10) Store ashes in a non-combustible metal container with a tightly fitted lid. Place the closed container on a non-combustible floor, well away from combustible materials. If ashes are to be buried or otherwise locally dispersed, store in a sealed container until all cinders have cooled.

Food Check Out Day Celebrated By Western PA Farm Bureaus

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

PITTSBURGH (Allegheny Co.)–Two of the Ronald McDonald House's storage rooms on "Food Check Out Day," Feb. 9, were stockpiled with about two tons of foodstuffs, courtesy of the 18 western county Farm Bureaus in Pennsylvania.

Significantly, the celebration was held on the 40th day of the year, connoting the length of time the average family in the United States works to pay for its yearly food intake.

"Food Check Out Day gives us a chance to highlight how affordable food is in America," said Guy Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau sought participation from the community when it began to collect donations of food and supplies for Ronald McDonald Houses (RMH) located throughout the state. Besides Pittsburgh, RMH's are found in Philadelphia, Hershey, Scranton and Danville. Each was encircled by a district of county Farm Bureaus simultaneously celebrating the event.

"Ronald McDonald Houses provide a 'home away from home' for the families of seriously ill children receiving treatment at nearby hospitals," said Donaldson. "The houses depend on local volunteers and donations to operate."

The president added further that the Keystone State, distinctively, is home to the largest rural population in the nation. Farm Bureau members are occasionally among those traveling to the city and being lodged at an RMH because a very ill youngster is being treated with the latest medical technology.

"Ronald McDonald Houses provide much appreciated, home-like living quarters so families can be near their children during these stressful times," said Donaldson.

Somerset County, alone, delivered one ton of food and supplies to the Pittsburgh facility, plus a $645 cash gift that was included in $1,295 collected in the district.

Spokesperson Denise Rohrbaugh, Somerset, who was the western district contact with Camp Hill headquarters of the state Farm Bureau, gave a short address when the goods were delivered. She was accompanied to the ceremony by Somerset Farm Bureau directors, Phil Lehman, Don Shipley and Fred Bouch.

Denise's husband, Darryl Rohrbaugh also was a co-spokesperson. The couple took along their eldest son, Justin.

Also attending were representatives of Beaver, Butler, Lawrence, Cambria, and Jefferson County Farm Bureaus.

Denise Rohrbaugh

Somerset Farm Bureau officers gather at Walker's Farm Service in Somerset next to the van of goods and supplies collected for Ronald McDonald House in Pittsburgh. From left, are Phil Lehman and Don Shipley, directors; Greg Walker from Walker's Farm Service; Kurt Walker, vice-president; Harold Shaulis, president; Fred Boucher, director; Debra Ott, newsletter editor; Darryl Rohrbaugh, spokesperson and Phil Ott, director. Also Denise Rohrbaugh secretary and Erma Jacobs, treasurer.

Mrs. Rohrbaugh was ecstatic about the success of the local effort in response to the letters of invitation she sent out. It was carpe diem for young people who "seized the day," and adopted the project. They were the student council of the Salisbury-Elk Lick High School, Somerset Boy Scout Troop 131, and the Meyersdale FFA Chapter. Also the Country Clovers and High Ridge 4-H Clubs which collected foodstuffs.

The representative body at Salisbury-Elk Lick held an all-grades homeroom content to win a pizza party for the most goods collected. The kids from the state's second smallest school district, enthusiastically, raised 1,742 items for the Farm Bureau and RMH. First and 11th grades were the pizza winners.

Student council adviser, Louis Tuscano, said that every year student council launches a community project. It was special this time; however, spawned from the outpouring of help in 1998 when tornadoes devastated their community. It was a golden opportunity to pass to others the help that they, themselves, had received.

The scouts raised cash donations and collected food at two Giant Eagle Markets, County Market and BiLo Market in Somerset. The scouts at each station were joined by a Farm Bureau director.

The Meyersdale FFA, did a local project in support of Food Check Out Day. FFA officers on Feb. 9, went to the Meyersdale Shop 'N Save and paid the grocery bill for three very surprised and randomly selected shoppers. The chapter spent about $200.

"The object is to let them know their food is a bargain," explained adviser, Jim Stutzman.

Shopper Norma Meyers said at first she wondered why so many youths in requisite blue, corduroy jackets were standing near the store check out lanes, as if expecting something to happen.

"I am surprised and thankful," she said, happily.

Even better, it worked out that state FFA officers–president Elio Chiarelli, Jr. and treasurer Adam Longenecker–were in town visiting the Meyersdale Chapter. So the young men with their hosts, participated in Food Check Out Day.

The other shoppers whose groceries were paid by the FFA were Lewis A. Zook and Ted and Joann Minnick, who all have Meyersdale addresses.

"They all did a fantastic job," said Denise Rohrbaugh, elated. She highly commended the young adults for generating high interest in Somerset County's second annual Food Check Out Day and RMH Pittsburgh, which serves 800 families each year.

Walker's Farm Service, Somerset, provided space for all the donations until they were delivered on Feb. 9 to RMH Snyder of Berlin, an agri-link business, donated some 10 boxes filled with the snack food varieties it produces.

Meet Pennsylvania's Outstanding Young Farmers Under 30

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Many people undergo a career metamorphosis between teen and adult years. Sometimes the change is expected and sometimes surprising.

Perhaps no one was more stunned by Ammon Peiffer Jr.'s change than he, himself. Ammon and his wife Brenda recently were named Pennsylvania's Outstanding Young Farmers Under 30.

When I was in high school, I didn't have any intention of staying on the farm," Ammon said. "If I'd have known, I probably would have paid more attention in FFA."

For a few years after high school graduation, Ammon operated a custom combining business.

"For some reason I got interested in milking. It just kind of grew on me," Ammon said. Growing up on his parents' Lebanon County farm, milking had seemed too time restraining, and he didn't feel any affinity for the cows.

That has changed. Now Ammon is always searching for ways to improve cow health and production.

He and his wife have made so many improvements that they were selected Regional Seven Outstanding Young Farmers Under 30.

As regional winners, the Peiffers knew they were automatically entered in the state competition.

"But we didn't expect to be selected," Brenda said. "When filling out the application, we were amazed ourselves at how much we had accomplished."

Surprised because change often seems slow when one has big dreams and limited resources.

The couple married in 1997 and Ammon took over farming responsibilities because his dad had lung problems. Ownership of the 65-acre farm continues to belong to his dad, who is able to help a bit with cropwork.

Brenda, although not from a dairy farm, had some ties to farming in neighboring Berks County. Her dad helped on his family's farm and drives a milk truck. As a high schooler, Brenda had no interest in farming. She earned a bachelor's degree with the intent of working toward a master's in physical therapy.

"But while I was in school (Beaver College), I began to appreciate what I took for granted growing up. I valued my upbringing and decided that a farm is the best place to raise a family," Brenda said.

Brenda chose to help her husband full time on the farm rather than pursue a master's degree. The couple are expecting their first child in June.

The couple milk 60 Holsteins.

The Peiffers dream is to "stand all the cows" and have everything on one farm.

"We stand 40 and switch cows," Brenda said.

That inconvenience has not hindered a spurt in milk production. When Ammon took over, the herd averaged 18,300 pounds of milk. Now DHIA records show a rolling herd average of 22,913 pounds.

"We don't use BST and we milk only twice daily," Ammon said.

He attributes the two-year spurt to buying a used mixer to feed total mixed rations.

Cow comfort, no doubt, also contributes to the increase. Mattresses were installed in the stalls in 1997, and last year, fans were installed for tunnel ventilation.

The farm had no calf facilities and the Peiffers used calf hutches in the beginning.

"Because we were breeding better calves, we wanted a better place to raise them," Ammon said.

They searched the advantages and disadvantages of several different facilities and settled on erecting a 30X65-feet greenhouse with ridge venting and side curtains.

"We didn't want to put in a permanent structure since we don't plan on staying here," Ammon said.

The couple are delighted with the greenhouse, which houses 25 calves and can easily be expanded by adding five-foot sections.

Condensation and stuffiness can easily be controlled with proper ventilation.

"Since we are feeding better, paying more attention to details, and have the greenhouse, the calves have been really growing nicely. We haven't lost any calves," Brenda said.

About 65 percent of the Holsteins are registered. The goal is to attain 100 percent registration.

"If you're going to have cows, why not have them registered? You can market them better," Ammon said.

Although the couple is concentrating on improving cow genetics, they said, it is still too early to reap those results.

The work is time consuming because not only do the cows need to be switched for milking, but the operation is spread over three farms requiring 1½ hours daily running back and forth for feeding dry cows and 50 replacements. They rent an additional 200 acres.

Brenda oversees the record-keeping and developed a spreadsheet for the operation. She said computer training is one example of where her college studies translated into usefulness on the farm.

"I'd be lost if it wasn't for Brenda," Ammon said of maintaining computer records.

The couple ships milk to Land 'O Lakes.

Although Ammon grew up showing cattle in 4-H and FFA competitions, Brenda did not. She had helped her cousins and was fascinated with the skill required. Now she shows some of the herd at Lebanon and Schuylkill fairs. Last season, they showed the grand champion cow at Schuylkill, a 4-year-old cow they had purchased as a heifer to use as a foundation cow for their herd. The cow went on to be named supreme champion.

After the cow did so well, the Peiffers started using her for flushing to the same bull that had sired one of their champion calves.

Although only four eggs were flushed, it resulted in four pregnancies, which they expect will improve future herd genetics.

Before the couple married, Ammon named the farm "Boxed in Acres," he said, "because it's boxed in by developments and across the road by Wengert's Dairy."

But visitors see the attractive layout and open space surrounding the brick farmhouse and the white barns. It's only after the Peiffers point out their belief that continuing to farm in this location is not a possibility that one notices large, new homes across the fields.

"This land is far too valuable for development to remain in farming," Ammon said. "It's good ground (limestone soil) for farming, but the price of land is hard for a young couple to afford."

Spiraling milk prices haven't dampened this young couple's enthusiasm.

Ammon said, "In the two years we've been in this, farming has been good to us. You need to put away when times are good to make it through the rough times."

"We're optimistic most days, but somedays we question (the wisdom of farming)," Brenda said.

Last summer's drought resulted in only 10-15 tons corn per acre compared with 25 tons on a good year. Alfalfa haylage was also cut in half.

Fortunately, the Peiffers still had excess forage from 1998 to carry them over.

Corn silage is unloaded into a 18x70-feet concrete stave silo. Ammon adds propionic acid to insure good fermentation. He believes it improves the nutrient value of drought-stressed corn silage.

The Peiffers read articles and attend Young Farmer programs and educational events such as Ag Progress to keep abreast on farming research.

"I'm not afraid to ask questions. I don't know everything," Ammon said of knowledge that can be gained just by talking with other farmers.

Although it is often difficult to take time away from farm responsibilities, the Peiffers said it is well worth the sacrifice.

Ammon and Brenda, who are 26- and 25-years-old respectively, said they have several friends their age who are also farming.

"There's a handful of us willing to take the risk," he said.

Despite some experts' predictions, the Peiffers believe small family farms will survive. But, they said, it will require beginners such as themselves to move to areas where land is cheaper.

For relaxation, both participate in a volleyball league. Brenda has been taking quilt classes.

The couple said they don't really like being thrust in the limelight as state Outstanding Young Farmers. "We're more low key," Ammon said.

At the same time, by reflecting on the changes that have been made, the process has enabled them to see results.

"It's been really satisfying seeing how things have progressed here. It's hard work but worth it," Brenda said.

Since the Peiffers erected the 30X65-feet greenhouse, behind them, to house calves, they have had no calf fatalities. The Peiffers believe that increased cow comfort and TMR rations has boosted herd production from 18,300 to 22,643 in less than two years.

Pennsylvania Outstanding Young Farmers — Under 30 are Ammon and Brenda Peiffer Jr. They operate Boxed In Acres, a dairy farm in Lebanon County. The couple are active in the Cedar Crest Young Farmer Chapter, where Ammon is president.

NOTES TO DAD

Nina L. Redding
Adams Co. Extension
Family Living Agent

Dads in agriculture are special, especially older dads like 68-year-old Adams County fruit grower Guy Donaldson. Recently, I spent a morning with Guy as we talked about his life and his family's future in agriculture. You see Guy and his wife Betty, grandparents of seven, are in the process of selling their fruit farm to their three children Beverly, Steve, and David.

Guy was quick to mention that Betty encouraged him some time ago to begin looking at turning the operation over to the children and letting them get more involved with the management decisions.

He says "We all have heard stories of how parents never let go of a farm and almost take it to the grave. This makes for hard feeling with the children."

He didn't want that for his family.

With a twinkle in his eye, Guy spoke lovingly of his three children. It was obvious he was quite proud of them. Each has an area of specialty in their new partnership since they hire only one other full time person.

Beverly, the oldest, manages the Donaldson Farm Market, handles record keeping and finances. Steve, the oldest son, handles everything production related, spraying, pruning, everything horticulture; and David the youngest handles all the mechanical needs of the farm along with hiring and labor during harvest season.

I asked Guy if there were any challenges to stepping back as an agriculture dad. He said, "Naturally there are, everyday. It's natural not to want to let go of the farm because you spent a life time getting to where you are. The children do things different than when I did it when I was in control. A different management style–that takes some getting used to."

Guy mentioned that he and Betty have noticed that since they have removed themselves from the day to day things, the children have come together closer as brothers and sister.

Each was very independent, but now they have changed. They plan and talk more and that's encouraging to him as a dad.

He was quite honest when he told me one of his concerns was that they would not hit it off when they formed the partnership. With a big smile, he was proud to tell me he has developed trust in them. "They have had to make some of the tough decisions that Betty and I have made and that has matured them," he said.

As many of you know who have worked hard to buy a farm, pride in your business runs deep.

Guy shared the story of how his father's heart attack while Guy was in his first year of college brought him back home to take over the farm. His father's poor health, found Guy making most of the major decision with the help of a very supportive mother.

Eventually, Guy and Betty bought the original 267-acre home place located in Carroll Valley, which was once part of a tract of land from Lord Baltimore. Guy is proud to say he and Betty worked day and night to pay for the farm in 10 years. He laughs as he mentions, back then, the biggest entertainment the family had was going to Gettysburg on a Saturday night and getting a pound of steamed shrimp.

It appears that that hard work and determination has paid off and is being carried forth in the new generation of Donaldsons. Today the family owns more than 400 acres and farms about 500 acres. The majority of their land is used for growing production apples, about 50 acres of sour cherries, about 10 acres of peaches, and some acreage for production of vegetables for the roadside market.

This special agriculture dad concluded by saying, "Many parent's have children move out of the area and only see them on special occasions. I'm fortunate. I see my children every day and each day is a special occasion." A father's love is a wonderful thing.

ANSWER — Thelma Boll, Harleysville, wanted to know how to keep homebaked cookies from becoming hard when serving them on a plate and storing them for later use. Thanks to both L. Stoltzfus and Dixie Fix, Harrisonville, who suggest putting a piece of bread in the storage container. When the bread gets hard, replace with a fresh piece. This keeps the cookies soft and fresh.

ANSWER — A reader wants a recipe for coconut custard pie. Thanks to Sandy Farmer, Maytown, who sent in a recipe that she said is absolutely the best, easiest pie ever. Minno van der Wal sent the same recipe except Bisquick mix is substituted for the flour. Minno bakes her pie in a 9-inch greased pie pan at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Both recipes make their own crusts.

Coconut Custard Pie

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine the following in a blender:

4 eggs
5 tablespoons butter
½ cup flour
2 cups milk
¾ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons vanilla
Add:
1 cup coconut

Blend several seconds. Pour into a greased and floured 10-inch pie pan or two 8-inch pans. Bake 50-60 minutes. Pie forms its own crust.

Thanks to an anonymous reader for sending in her favorite recipe for Coconut Custard Pie.

Coconut Custard Pie

2 cups milk
3 egg yolks
5 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup coconut

Line pie pan with pastry, build up edges. Brush bottom with melted shortening and dust with a little flour to prevent custard from soaking in.

Scald milk and cool. Mix together sugar, flour, and salt, and add beaten egg yolks. Next add milk and flavoring. Stir in ¾cup coconut. Turn into pie pan and bake in 450-degree oven for 15 minutes until pastry begins to brown. Sprinkle over top of custard the remaining ¼ cup coconut. Reduce heat to 325 degrees, return to oven and bake until custard is set, about 30 minutes longer.

ANSWER — Mrs. Zimmerman, Manheim, wanted recipes to make ice cream cake. Thanks to a reader who sent in the following recipe.

Ice Cream Cake

1 box yellow cake mix with pudding
1 small box instant chocolate pudding mix
4 eggs
½ cup oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup water

Mix together ingredients. Pour into two 9x13-inch pans. Bake at 350 degrees.

Cool cake and top with vanilla ice cream the same depth as the cake. Freeze. Top with whipped cream topping, chocolate syrup, and nuts.

ANSWER — K. Moyer, Summerville, wanted information on Sure Jel and Clear Jel. Thanks to several readers for responding. One wrote that Sure Jel is a brand name for fruit pectin used in making jelly. Clear jel is a thickening similiar to corn starch, but as the name implies, cooks clear and thick, not as whitish as corn starch tends to do. Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, sent this explanation: Sure Jel is for making jams and jellies. There are two types of Clear Jel: regular is not recommended for frozen food applications. Instant enables products to be refrigerated and frozen. Clear Jel is a corn starch that has been modified to give it special and unique characteristics when used in food products. For more in depth explanations write to National Starch and Chemical Corp., 10 Finders Ave., Bridgewater, N.J. 08807. They send a lot of helpful information.

ANSWER — Gail Isennock wanted a recipe to make a cookie that tastes like the brown edged wafers that Nabisco used to make. Thanks to Debby Goff, Riegelsville, who writes that she made these cookies often when she was a teenager. Here is the recipe.

Brown-Edged Butter Cookies

½ cup softened butter
⅓ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
1 egg
¾ cup flour
⅛ teaspoon salt

Beat the first four ingredients until light and fluffy. Add flour and salt. Mix well. Drop by half teaspoonfuls onto ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for about 10 minutes or until edges are golden brown. Store cookies airtight. Makes 2 dozen.

CORRECTION — The recipe for Squash Pie that appeared in the Feb. 12th issue should have listed ½ teaspoon ginger and ½ teaspoon salt instead of listing ½ teaspoon ginger twice.

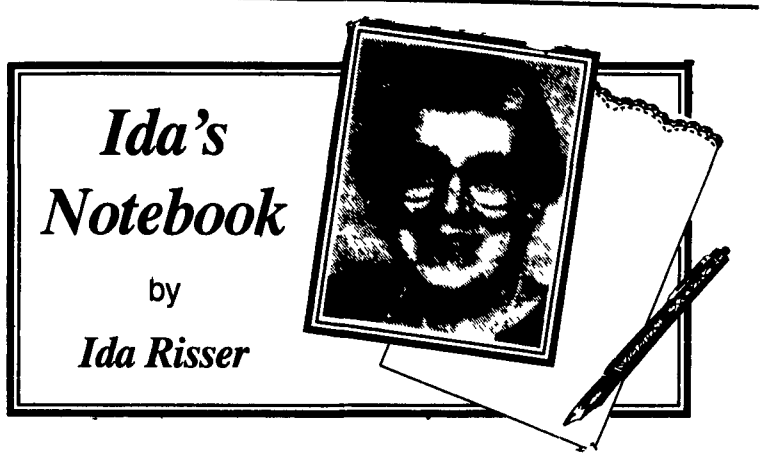
Cumberland County 4-H Horse Club held its 4-H Achievement Banquet at the West Pennsboro Firehall, Plainfield. From left, Heidi Evelhock, daughter of Betty and David Evelhock, Shippensburg, is selected Outstanding 4-H Horse Member; Sandy Long, Carlise, is recognized for completing 35 years as a volunteer leader; Phylis Martin, Shippensburg, completed 10 years as a 4-H leader; and Mary Strasbaugh, daughter of Glenda and Tim Strasbaugh, Mechanicsburg, receives the Mrs. Merle Dubs Memorial Award for achieving the highest record score.



The past century has seen many changes. Not the least among these are how we buy things.

In the early 1900s the sellers went to the customers. Peddlers walked from house to house selling shoe strings, pins, handkerchiefs, and other necessities. The McNess salesman and the Watkins salesman often stopped at farms to supply the housewife with vanilla, cleaners, and Musterole to rub on the chests of sick children.

Even in the 1950s we had a "ragman" who stopped regularly at our farm. He also bought metal that had accumulated around the farm. Twice a week a delivery man brought bread to our kitchen door. Then the price was a small fraction of what we now pay when we run to the store for bread. One day unbeknownst to me, my 12-year-old daughter ordered a lot of buns for a birthday surprise for me. Then a younger child became sick and the party was almost canceled.

In villages milk was delivered early each morning. And, icemen lugged blocks of ice to be put in the icebox–before refrigerators. My mother often told me about the fish peddler who came every Saturday night blowing a horn to alert the housewives of his arrival. Her family usually bought oysters for the evening meal.

Nowadays we go to the seller–wherever his store is located. It might be nearby or miles away in a mall. We still expect service but it is not the kind that we got at our doorstep.

Now I'll get back to work on my 18th braided rug. This one will be blue, grey and red if I can find enough material to finish it.

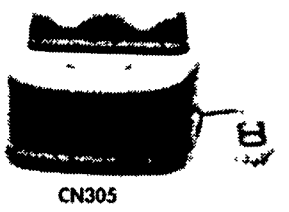
EVERGAIN AEROBIC EXERCISERS
For Better Health, Fitness & Relaxation

Ideal for people who don't have time to exercise
Excellent for older people and those who are overweight and can't exercise.
5 minutes on this machine is equal to 20 minutes of walking
Gain benefits for life with the Evergain Aerobic Exerciser.



CN305

Major Benefits Experienced By People Using The Aerobic Exerciser

1. Increases the oxygen level in the blood.
Insufficient oxygen in the blood can cause many health problems The vacillating motion of the machine stimulates the sympathetic nerve and also expands the bronchial tubes and reactivates the respiratory system to increase the intake of more oxygen

2. Stimulates the lymphatic system.
Since the lymphatic system does not have a pump like the heart it depends on exercise to pump the fluid through the lymphatic system to rid the body of toxins and waste matter

3. Improves the blood circulation.
People who sit or stand on the job, or the elderly who just sit and lay around and don't exercise, can develop a stagnant and sluggish circulatory system As a result, the nutrition doesn't get distributed throughout the body that it needs and neither can it get rid of toxins and impurities So health problems develop

4. Aligns The Spine To Relieve Back Pain.
With the body reclining on a flat surface, no weight on the spine, and the back of each foot laying in the cradle of the machine which moves left and right it wiggles the spine like a fish swimming through water This oscillating movement helps to realign the spine

5. Increases the energy level.
The controlled oscillating movement stimulates the whole body including the immune system This can result in increased energy and stamina When a person is tired, a few minutes on the machine works wonders

6. Produces a relaxed feeling.
5 minutes on the machine before going to bed can give you a relaxed restful experience 10 minutes or more in the morning can stimulate your body and get you off to a good start for the day 10 minutes any time during the day can help tired and sore muscles Instead of laying on the floor, older and overweight people can lay a board across the bottom and full width of the bed and set the machine on it

Ideal for people who don't have time to exercise, and older people who are overweight and can't exercise.

Growing Up Amish

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

What's it like growing up without electricity, without a car, and without television?

Lots of fun is the answer for Lydia, Erma, and Ephraim. The three are the children of Mervin and Sylvia Allgyer.

They are Amish who live in Christiana in Lancaster County. Lydia is 6, Erma is 5, and Ephraim is 3.

If you go to their home, the children come running to eagerly greet visitors. They call, "Hi! Hi!" Smiles spread across their faces and their eyes sparkle with delight. They enjoy having company.

Surprisingly, "Hi!" is about the only word the two youngest children can speak in English.

In their home, as in all Amish homes, the families speak Pennsylvania Dutch instead of English.

When Lydia entered first grade this year, she didn't know how to speak English. At the one-room Amish school she attends, the lessons are taught in English. To learn a new language while learning to write, add, and subtract sounds difficult. But Lydia, like many other Amish children, had no trouble learning English. Within a few months, Lydia could easily talk in English.

However, during recess and lunchtime, the children are expected to talk in Pennsylvania Dutch. The government has a special agreement with the Amish that allows them to retain their culture as long as they are taught the same basic lessons in math, reading, and geography that children in the public school system receive.

Although they do not have electricity, Amish homes are much like those of their English-speaking neighbors. Their house, heated with a woodstove, is warm and cozy.. Registers in the upstairs bedrooms allow some of the heat from the downstairs to come up through the opening. That means it isn't freezing upstairs but it is cooler than the bedrooms in most homes that are heated with oil, coal, and electricity.

The beds have lots of blankets and comforters to keep the children warm.

Propane gas is used to operate the cookstove, refrigerator, and hot water heater. That means that Amish homes have running water and a bathroom. Because they live in an older farmhouse, the bathroom only has a small shower. The children take baths in a large Rubbermaid storage box used for a tub.

Although the children do not have cars, they like to go away. In fact, almost every morning they awaken, they ask: "Where are we going today?"

They travel by horse and buggy. The horses used to pull the buggy are like pets. The horses are so tame that the children ride horseback on them around the fields. Sometimes the children walk underneath the horses bellies. The parents don't want them to do that because some of the newer horses are not as trustworthy as the older horses, which sense they need to be very gentle around children.

The children usually wake up about 6:30 in the morning and go to bed at 8:30 in the evening.

During the day the girls like coloring and workbooks. Although Erma doesn't go to school, she writes her name and all the numbers. She taught herself numbers by copying them off the calendar.

Although many Amish girls like to play with dolls, Erma never cared much for dolls. When she was 3-years-old, Erma broke her wrist. Her dad said that happen because Erma was "monkeyshining" on the couch.

Erma likes helping her mother with chores around the house. She likes to help in the garden and she likes helping to cook.

Amish schools only go to the eighth grade. After that, the children work at home and go to school for three hours a week until they are 15 years old. From eighth grade until they are 15 years old, the students need to keep a diary that records their daily activities. This is part of the agreement between the Amish and the government in making special exceptions for Amish schooling.

Although the Amish do not go to a church building, they do have church. About 30 families take turns gathering in each other's homes for a Sunday morning church service held every other Sunday.

The parents of the Allgyers said that the Amish church keeps growing larger and larger. When it expands to about 40 to 50 families, the group is divided to form another church. In 1960, the Allgyers said, there were only 30 church districts in the county. Today there are 160.

No phones are allowed inside Amish homes. Instead they have what they call a community phone, which is shared by seven Amish families living in the area. The community phone is kept in a building outside the house.

The Amish do not allow photographs of themselves or their children to be taken so this story does not have pictures of Lydia, Erma, and Ephraim. If you happen to see Amish children in town, say "Hi" to them, but remember the younger ones usually do not know English.

This isn't a problem if Amish children play with English-speaking children. The Allgyers say that when English speaking neighbors come to visit, the children have lots of fun playing together and speaking the same language doesn't keep them from understanding each other.

For children, growing up Amish is just like growing up in other homes. The children are happy, they love their parents, their brothers and sisters. They like playing outside and inside. They learn to color, read, and write.

Kids Learn About Germs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–Pennsylvania schools project, Fight Bac! is part of a nationwide campaign to promote awareness of food safety to prevent incidents of foodborne illness that affect 33,000 Americans each year.

Fight Bac! familiarizes students in Pennsylvania's middle and high schools with key principles of food safety: hand washing, proper cooling and storage, sufficient heating of food during preparation and avoiding cross contamination.

The project provides hands-on activities–for example, the hand-washing lesson incorporates Glow Germ, a fluorescent compound that glows under a black light. Teachers can apply it, shake some students' hands as they enter the room, then turn out the lights to illustrate how germs pass from person to person.

Heart Health and Fake Fats

Heart disease is the number one cause of death in the United States and millions of dollars have been spent on research over the last half century resulting in major improvements in all aspects of heart care, from earlier detection of risk factors such as blood cholesterol and homocysteine levels to techniques that repair clogged arteries without surgery.

Many studies have reinforced the relationship between diet and heart disease. Incidence of strokes and heart attacks are greater in countries where the diets are high in foods containing saturated fat such as meats and cheeses. Diet recommendations have evolved from research examining how various fatty foods affect blood lipid levels, specifically LDLs (the bad cholesterol) and HDLs (the good cholesterol). Foods high in saturated fat and trans fatty acids have been shown to raise LDLs and lower HDLs. The fat found in fish and olive oil has been shown to raise HDLs while lowering LDLs, a positive result.

Fat is an essential component of our diet. While most of us get more than we need, limiting fat intake to less than 10% of total calories may result in skin lesions, increased illness and vitamin deficiencies in fat soluble vitamins, A, D, E, and K, some of which are antioxidants that keep our eyes healthy, reduce certain cancer risks and delay cell breakdown.

The Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend that fat calories be less than 30% of our total calories, about 600 calories or 65 grams when consuming about 2000 calories a day. Recommendations for persons with high cholesterol, diagnosed heart disease or other risk factors limit fat intake to 20-25% of total calories.

Food producers have responded to Americans desire to reduce fat intake by offering low fat versions of many of our foods. Some, such as 1% milk or leaner ground beef have become staples whereas low fat cookies have not fared as well. Fat enhances flavor and adds texture to foods, challenging manufacturers to find substitute ingredients that maintain the characteristics of the original product.

Recently foods traditionally high in fat have begun to appear on supermarket shelves containing fake fats. Olestra or Olean™, a product of Proctor and Gamble, is probably the best known because of the national opposition mounted by the center for Science in the Public Interest several years ago. Found in WOW potato chips and other snack foods, olestra is not absorbed by the body so it adds no calories and is excreted in much the same manner as fiber. Too much olestra can cause some abdominal distress and loose stools as well as limiting fat soluble vitamin absorbtion. It is not recommended for persons with existing GI diseases. Most consumers eat chips with other foods so the side effects are not commonly found and WOW snacks are found in most grocery stores today.

Benecol™, Taking Control™, and Phytol™ are spreads (butter substitutes) that have been shown to reduce blood cholesterol levels in a yearlong study when 2-3 servings a day were eaten. Made from wood pulp or soy, these plant sterols are absorbed and contribute calories but not fat to the diet. At present, these spreads are more expensive than butter or margarine. Benecol™ is packaged in 1 tablespoon servings rather than the traditional soft spread tub. No side effects have been reported.

Benefat™ is the trademark for salatrim, a lower calorie fat found in chocolate chips and other confections. Containing 5 calories per gram rather than the 9 calories per gram of fats, salatrim may reduce calorie and fat intake when consuming sweet treats. Cholesterol levels and vitamin absorption are not affected and no side effects have been reported.

Are fake fats for you? The decision should be based on your desire to limit fats in your diet–whether to lose or control weight, reduce cholesterol or just maintain a low fat intake for overall good health.

Fake fats will be tasted and reviewed on March 1, 1:00–3:00 and repeated from 7:00–9:00 in the "What's New at the Supermarket" class held at Delaware County Cooperative Extension in Smedley Park, Springfield. Call (610) 690-2655 for more details.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Vermont is looking for you.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania. The Dairy of Distinction recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms.

The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, thus increasing sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of building, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from the road. Your milk cooperative or handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during local June Dairy Month activities. To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Del-Jame Farm near Hamburg in Berks County is a 1999 Dairy of Distinction winner. Since the program began in 1987 in Pennsylvania, more than 700 farms have been given this farm beautification award. Entries are now being received for the year 2000 program. Take time to enter your farm now.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

New York State applications are available from Carol Keene-Ainsille, 3993 Jordonville Road, Jordonville, NY 13361. Phone: (315) 858-2770.

For New Jersey applications, contact Joy Ricker, 91 Beemer Road, Sussex, NJ 07461. Phone: (973) 875-4803.

For Vermont applications, send to Elisa Clancy, Vermont Department of Agriculture, 16 State Street, Drawer 20, Montpelier, VT 05620-2901. Phone: (802) 828-3835.

All applications must be completed and returned to your respective state secretary by April 15, 2000.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by dairy farmers through the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from the Penn State Cooperative Extension.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors that can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighted heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway. If the farm is off the road, the judging will take place from the nearest lane. Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for the award agree that if selected they will cooperate with these promotion activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of heir properties in an acceptable manner.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to the Dairy of Distinction state secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their signs. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1) The Dairy of Distinction sign remains property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2) The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' can be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3) Signs shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post or bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size, and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damages.
4) Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign
5) Replacement of damaged signs is at the committee's discretion.
6) No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses.
7) Judges' decisions will be final.
8) Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9) Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10) Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction committee.

Combine Disappointments With Achievements To Spell Success

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Junia Isiminger knows how to be a winner and a loser. Well, not exactly a loser.

Instead she's learned how to turn disappointments into positive experiences.

Recently appointed as public relations and special promotions director to Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services Inc. (PDPPS), Junia brings multiple perspectives to the job.

She will be working with dairy princesses, alternates, and dairy promotion committees. Because she has served on all three levels, she is well acquainted with what works and what doesn't.

She also knows that many county dairy princesses experience the death of a dream when they are not selected as the state winner.

In 1987 Junia was the Crawford County dairy princess under her maiden name of Laughery.

"I was hoping to win, but I didn't," she said of the state crown. Forty-two contestants were hoping for the same accomplishment.

But only one could win.

After the initial letdown, Junia realized that she could still contribute a lot to dairy promotion and also get a lot out of the experience.

She threw herself into dairy promotion in her county, and to this day she is recognized by many who recall seeing her at work in that capacity. She especially excelled in radio spots, newspaper articles, and working at both ends of the age spectrum with elementary kids and nursing homes.

It's also important to know that Junia had served the previous year as a county alternate.

"I learned to be an assistant to the team," she said. The value of assisting others has honed her people skills and has even benefited her during marriage to Mike Isiminger.

"In many situations such as in marriage, one is part of a team. You support your spouse in his or her decisions. Sometimes you get to lead, but always it's important to be a team player," Junia said.

As a county alternate, Junia had been extremely active in promotion.

"I wasn't planning to run again, but my dad (Ed Laughery) encouraged me to try again. It was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

That year Junia won the county crown and learned what it felt like to be a team leader.

When her reign ended, Junia did not resign from dairy promotion but continued with the Crawford County committee in charge of dairy promotion.

It's a position she never quit. She's kept active even while attaining an associate degree as legal assistant from Gannon University, in an eight-year career in the legal system, and in her return to school to attain a bachelor's degree in business administration. She will graduate in December, but has already assumed full-time responsibilities with PDPPS.

Appointed public relations and special promotions director for Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc., is Junia Isiminger of Crawford County. Junia, a former dairy princess, has remained active in dairy promotion since 1986.

Junia and her husband operate a dairy farm next door to the 300-acre farm where Junia grew up.

Mike did not grow up on a farm, but worked on a neighboring dairy farm. Mike and Junia were FFA members who met at the annual state FFA Convention, Penn State. The two struck up a conversation and became a couple when she was in 10th grade and Mike a Junior. They recently celebrated their 10th anniversary.

Because both have full-time off-the-farm jobs, they share farming responsibilities. Junia takes care of the herd in the morning, and Mike takes care of evening chores. With her new position with PDPPS, some overnight travel is necessary. This means Mike will need to fill in the gaps during Junia's absence.

Junia said that her preference for Shorthorns dates back to showing in 4-H when she selected the breed because they were easier to show than Holsteins. Compared to Hosteins, the breed is calmer, not as tall, but close in weight. Our farm is on a high hill, so Shorthorns seem to withstand the weather better," Junia said.

All the cow's bloodlines date back to her 4-H days of showing.

Recently the herd was thinned after a four-year run of heifer calves. While that is an enviable position, it also created problems. The Isimingers had cows they didn't want to cull and not enough room for all the heifer calves.

"We have only 24 head, but they are all great cows," Junia said.

Windswept Dairy Farm is descriptive of the farm where there is always a breeze, even during the calmest summer day.

Mike and Junia are active members of their dairy cooperative's young cooperative boards. It is in association with Dairy Farmers of America's that Junia experienced one of the most thrilling experiences of her lifetime. She addressed a group of 2,000 at the first annual convention conducted by the association. It was the first meeting after four cooperatives had merged and exciting for her to be part of the planning sessions for the Young Cooperative Steering Committee.

While mergers and changes are threatening to some, Junia said, "We cannot just look at protecting our corner. Although it is wonderful to have our little cooperative, we are not being realistic to think that it will work. The world is global, and we must think globally."

In addition to dairy ties, Junia is also a county 4-H leader of the Interstate Exchange Club. Last year the members hosted a group from Minnesota. This summer, the club will visit Minnesota.

As a teen-ager, Junia was already portraying leadership abilities. She was a 4-H member for 10 years and served as vice president and captain of the Dairy Bowl team, a 4-H delegate to Washington, D.C. Citizen Focus, and a co-operative delegate member to Summer Institute.

Junia was also a former FFA member and served as county president.

Junia's responsibilities with PDPPS requires her to work closely with county promotion committees throughout the sate and assist with chauffeuring and chaperoning dairy royalty. She will also be responsible for writing and publishing the organization's quarterly newsletter, the "Cowmunicator," and recording and tabulating monthly activity reports.

"I'm really enthusiastic about the program. I absolutely love

Amish Family Raises Non-Traditional Crop

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

CHRISTIANA (Lancaster Co.) — Traditionally Amish families are full-time farmers.

It's what Mervin and Sylvia Allgyer, a young Amish couple, would like to do.

But farmland is expensive. So the couple has found a way to use the 1½ acres on their rented property to raise a non-traditional crop while living a traditional Amish lifestyle.

They raise herbs from which Sylvia makes jellies and vinegars to market both wholesale and retail. The items are marketed under the name Lower Valley Gardens, which refers to the peaceful valley where they live in the southeastern part of Lancaster County. They also grow fresh produce such as baby pear red and yellow tomatoes for a restaurant supplier.

Pennsylvania Dutch cooking for which the Amish are famous does not use herbs in cooking. The idea was foreign to Sylvia at first. When she and her husband were first married, they had the opportunity to move on the property where the owners were already growing herbs and marketing them in Philadelphia.

After they rented the property, Sylvia read about using herbs in cooking and became intrigued. Eventually she developed a line of herbal jellies and vinegars. Although her mother and sisters like using culinary herbs, Sylvia said, most Amish families stick to traditional cooking.

Herbs are grown intensively in raised beds. When cut back, they grow again allowing continual use each growing season. Some varieties such as chives bloon only once during the year and must be harvested and used immediately, but most herbs can be harvested whenever convenient from mid-April through October.

Most herbs are perennials and need only to be thinned or dug out every five years. Some such as cilantro need to be sowed annually.

Consumers have a growing interest in medicinal herbs. The Allgyers do market some herbal extracts from a supplier. While Mervin is fascinated with the formulas needed to prepare medicinal herbs and would like to dabble in that area, his wife prefers to stay with culinary herbs.

She said that herbal vinegars can be used in many ways. Here are some suggestions:

- Substitute herbal recipes calling for apple cider or white vinegars. Try to select a herbal vinegar that compliments the main ingredient in the recipe.
- Substitute herbal vinegars for wine in recipes by diluting one part vinegar with three parts water.
- Marinate meats in herb-flavor wine vinegar to tenderess. The sourness cooks away, leaving the flavor of herbs and wine.
- Add a teaspoon of garlic-flavored wine vinegar and ½ teaspoon mustard to a pound of ground beef for better tasting burgers.
- To keep gelatin firmer in warm weather, add a teaspoon of vinegar. Add a teaspoon of vinegar to pies and other desserts to enhance flavor and to reduce over sweetness.

Sylvia said her favorite vinegar is one called Best Salad Vinegar, which includes dill, mint, and garlic in an apple cider vinegar base. "It's great for salads, dressings, mustards, and with pork," she said.

Her favorite jelly is a toss-up between garlic jelly served with cream cheese on a bagel or hot pepper jam served on cream cheese and crackers.

Sylvia markets her products in area stores and at craft shows. They supply items for a Philadelphia market standholder but do not attend market themselves. They also have a list of wholesale dealers.

Lower Valley Farms grow 20 varieties of fresh cut herbs. the most popular are sweet, lemon, and purple basils, chives, garlic, marjoram, sweet mint, Greek oregano, rosemary, sage, salad burnet, summer savory, French tarragon, and English and lemon thyme.

Herbs are wholesaled by the pound for wholesaling and by the ounce for retailing and is packed to the buyer's specifications.

The gourmet herbal and fruit vinegars are sold in 12.7-ounce bottles with 12 bottles per case, mixed or matched according to the buyer's preference. Some of the vinegars that Sylvia prepares include Basil Vinegar; Basil, Chile, Garlic Vinegar; Best Salad Vinegar; Blackberry Vinegar; Chive Blossom Vinegar; Fiesta Vinegar; Italian Garden Vinegar; Lemon Pepper Vinegar; Mint Vinegar; Red Raspberry Vinegar; Rosemary Vinegar; Sage Vinegar; Tarragon Vinegar; and Tarragon and Garlic Vinegar.

Gourmet herbal jellies and jams are packaged in 5-ounce jars with 24 per case, which can be mixed or matched. These include Chamomile; Cinnamon Basil, Cranberry Rosemary; Garlic; Hot Pepper Jam, Lemon Basil; Mint; Pineapple Sage; Rose Geranium; and Grape Thyme.

All Fruit Spreads with no added sugar and fruit picked at its peak come in the following varieties: blackberry, black raspberry; blueberry; red raspberry; and peach melba. A chocolate raspberry spread is sold to be spread on cheesecake, pound cake, and in thumbprint cookies.

Fruit jellies without seeds and jams are availble in the following varieties: blackberry, black raspberry, candy apple, and red raspberry.

Relishes and pickles include corn relish, pickle relish, salsa, bread and butter pickles, sweet dill, pickled beets, and chow chow.

Three days a week, Mervin works as a self-employed carpenter. He makes attractive crates to gift package the jellies and vinegars. Also he installs replacement windows and makes house repairs for customers.

Marvin recently started raising registered Morgan horses. This breed is used by the Amish for driving horses. Training a colt and mare requires lots of time. Mervin said it's important to spend at least 30 minutes daily for six months with the colt and mare they are training.

The Allgyers expect they will eventually sell their herb business and move to another state where they can afford to buy a farm. They aren't sure where but Mervin prefers a mountainous area.

The couple have three children, Lydia, 6; Erma, 5; and Ephraim, 3.

For more information or a brochure about the items they mailorder, write to Lower Valley Gardens, 117-A Lower Valley Rd., Christiana, PA 17509, or call (610) 593-5667.

Here are some of Sylvia's recipes:

it," Junia said of PDPPS. "Jan (Harding, who is director) and the board of coordinators are just great to work with."

Junia composed a survey to find out what's worked and what hasn't in county dairy promotions. "But I can't say what's worked in your square hole will work in someone's else's round one," Junia said of the need to be openminded. At the same time, she has learned that sometimes, something as small as a communication problem can spell the difference between success and failure.

At home, Junia has three cats and two dogs to pamper. A former manager of a Hallmark store, she found it convenient to collect Merry Moo Moos and Hallmark collectibles.

Junia's office is located on her farm at 23515 Range Rd., Union City, PA 16438. Questions and suggestions are welcomed. Phone (814) 694-2661 or e-mail: juniapdpps@aol.com

HORSE CLUB MEETING HELD

On January 26th the Cumberland County Light Horse and Pony Club held their monthly meeting. The meeting was at the Cumberland County Extension Office at 7 p.m. in the lower level.

Newly installed President, Nikki McCaffrey, called the meeting to order. Janine Guido lead the club in the American pledge, and Phyllis Martin, Novice Leader, took roll call. Levi Smith gave the treasurers report. After a brief report on the banquet held earlier this month, Carrie McLaughlin and Michelle Thomas gave a brief description of an article they are putting together for the Kids World Magazine on the club. This article will talk about our club members 13 and under and promote our horse club.

The 4-H members in the Novice and Tenderfoot books went upstairs for the portion of the program by Laura Watts from the Extension Office. Handouts were given on "Horses and the Internet" to each of the 4-H members and Ms. Watts explained how to use the Internet.

The older 4-H members remained downstairs for the other part of the evenings program on Parliamentary Procedures by County Extension Agent, Duane Duncan.

Heidi Evelhoch, our Recording Secretary, also did part of the program on how to get a head start on your project books. Heidi gave us several helpful suggestions in making our record keeping simple. At 7:30 p.m. the 4-H members switched places with the older ones going upstairs for the computer program and the younger staying downstairs for the procedure and record keeping program.

Seven Steps to Healthful Eating

Just like you take your car into the shop for a regular oil change, it's time to recheck and refine your eating habits.

March is National Nutrition Month, a month set aside by the American Dietetic Association for Americans to pause and assess their daily eating habits and physical activity levels.

The theme of this year's National Nutrition Month is "Food and Fitness: Health for a Lifetime." This theme helps Americans to focus on the important role that healthful eating and regular physical activity plays in their overall wellness.

Just like a car needs a certain grade of oil and certain type of fuel, our bodies run best on healthy, high quality, foods. We also function best when we exercise our bodies, more often than just a "Sunday drive." The benefits of good eating and exercise habits are many, including that you will look and feel your best and be able to do the things you want to do.

Healthful eating is easy. You don't need to follow a lot of rules. Here's how you can start making healthier food choices.

1. Start strong. Start your day with breakfast. Breakfast eaters do better at work and school. Fuel your body right with breakfast for energy and good nutrition.

2. Pick a few. Whenever you get the chance: breakfast, lunch buffets, or snacktime, grab fruits and vegetables. They are packed with nutrients. Most are low in fat and calories. And they taste great, too! Always include fruits and vegetables on your shopping list.

3. Mix it up. Enjoy lots of different foods from all the food groups. No one food has all the nutrients you need to be healthy.

Be brave. Explore new tastes and try new foods. Or, prepare a favorite food using a new, interesting recipe. Make it fun! Have your kids help you prepare the food and then everyone gets to rate it as "thumbs up" or "thumbs down."

5. Snack smart. Choose snacks from different food groups. Smart snack choices will count as some of your servings from the food guide pyramid.

6. Get moving. Dance around the room with your child or dog. Take a walk with your child or dog. Sweep the floor; weed the garden; jump for joy! You get the idea. Do whatever gets you moving. You will feel good and have more energy, too.

7. Count it. Use the Food Guide Pyramid as your map to healthful eating. Include all the food groups every day. Each group provides important nutrients your body needs to stay running at its best.

To obtain more information on fueling and exercising your body, you can call your local cooperative extension office or you can visit the American Dietetic Association on the World Wide Web: www.eatright.org or call 800-366-1655.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Round Valley Riders

The Round Valley Riders 4-H Horse Club has just had a very busy month.

Every Wednesday members have their study for the State Horse Bowl Competition. They sold refreshments at the 4-H Holiday Workshop at the Rutgers Extension Center and the following day they had their annual holiday party, where they celebrated their achievements for the year.

After the party, club members rode in a horse-drawn wagon in the Flemington Holiday Parade. The wagon was provided by Hunterdon Coach and Wagon.

Just before the parade the club sold cookies and cider on the steps of the Union Hotel to fund raise for a trip to a dude ranch we hope to take in the spring.

Meetings are held the third Tuesday of every month at the extension center. The club is open to boys and girls ages 9 to 19 who want to learn more about horses.

Call (908) 788-1340 for more information.

West Snyder FFA Aids Ronald McDonald House

The West Snyder FFA Chapter collected more than 350 pounds of food and goods and presented a check for $132 to the Snyder County Farm Bureau, which in turn made the donation to the Ronald McDonald House in Danville.

The project was conducted in cooperation with the Snyder County Farm Bureau and the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau National Food Checkout Day Program.

Feb. 9 served as National Food Checkout Day. Food Checkout Day was established to emphasize the affordability of food in America.

Statistics show that between Jan. 1–Feb. 9, the average American family earns enough money to feed their family for the entire year.

The donation toward the Ronald McDonald House was selected by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. The Ronald McDonald House was selected because it serves as a "home away from home" for families of children who are critically ill.

The members of the West Snyder FFA Chapter hope the families who stay at a Ronald McDonald house are as comfortable and well fed as possible.

Clarification

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — In a story in section B of the Feb. 19 issue of Lancaster Farming, a story supplied by Penn State provided incorrect information.

In the story about root crops, it was reported by Penn State that beets require high levels of boron. According to Pete Ferretti of the horticulture department at Penn State, "gardeners should mix one-quarter (¼) teaspoon of laundry borax powder into a gallon of water."

He noted, with all micronutrients, "apply exactly the amounts recommended and no more. If you only get a partial response, repeat the exact same amount after two weeks. If you still don't get enough response to the micronutrient, retest or seek professional advice before taking any other action."

ANSWER — Christine Westerhole, 2424 Edgemore Ave. Easton, PA 18045, wanted to know of a local breeder or owner of unregistered Border collies and Austrailian Shepherds. She wanted to buy a pup for a pet, not to breed or show. Thanks to Toni Kellers, Bucks Co., who writes that Border Collies are working dogs and often not suited for pets. You really cannot determine whether or not a pup will make a good pet. Generally Border Collies need lots of mental exercise, not just physical, and if they have good herding instinct this is even more important. There is a saying: Border Collies have to have something to do, and if you don't give them something to do, they will find something to do, and you probably won't like it.

Border Collie Rescue has dogs for adoption, usuually over one year of age (that is when people discover what they have gotten into you and pet potential is more pronnounced. Border Collies do not need to work sheep or cattle or pigs, but they do need to do something. They can be great agility dogs and fisbee dogs and fly-ball dogs, even therapy dogs — these are mental activities. Consider a Rescue Border Collie if you are set on the breed — lots of great dogs are looking for homes.

ANSWER — Loyed Adams, 541 Wintersteen School Rd., Millville, PA 17846, wanted to know where to purchase a Sotz automatic draft control for a barrel stove. Thanks to Richard Herring Sr. for e-mailing that it is available from Vogelzank International Corp., 400 W. 17th St., Holland, MI 49423.

Another reader that it is available from Martin's Sharpening, 502 Glenwood Dr., Ephrata, PA 17522. Phone (717) 733-0511.

ANSWER — Barbara Oldanteeks wanted to know how to preserve a a big old tin or steel roof on an old barn that has rusted. Thanks to Scott Bordner who writes that a product called Por 15 from Imperial Restoration Inc., 630-257-5822 is used to permanently end rust. It does not crack, chip, or peel. It gets as hard as ceramic. Scott put it on an anvil and hammered it hard, and it would not chip off. You need to paint over Por 15 coating with aluminum paint to prevent color change from ultraviolet rays, but it ends rust forever.

Shirley Wartzenluft, Robesonia, wrote that she used a product called Galva-Grip on her rusted barn roof. The product costs about $30 a gallon. A fibered aluminum roof coating is also very good and can be purchased in 5 gallon cans for about $40. Loose rust should be brushed off before painting.

Gempler's Agricultural Company carrieds a rust converter that bonds with the rust and stops it. Call Gemplers at 1-800-382-8473 or check hardware stores.

ANSWER — A reader wanted to know where to buy photo albums with fabric and lace covers. Thanks to S. Garman for writing that the covers are available at Weaver's Store in Fivepointville (717) 445-6791 and from Hayloft Fabrics in Martin's Country Market, Morgantown (610) 926-2908.

ANSWER — A reader wanted to know where to find Iris bulbs that bloom more than once and the name of a mail-order catalog where they are available. Thanks to the reader who wrote the correct name is rhizome. Charles Herwegh, West Chester, writes that the correct name is reblooming iris. In the past 20 years, he has compiled a list of more than 1,100 suppliers. Here are two supplies that he recommends: Friendship Gardens, 341 Schwartz Rd., Gettysburg, PA 17325. Iris Test Garden, 1102 Endicott St. John Rd., St. John, WA 99171.

ANSWER — A few weeks ago Pete Westover, Windsor Mill, Md., requested information on the American painter Paul Dettlefsen. Pete received many letters from other readers also wanting to know more about the artist. Jane Smeltzer, Pleasant Gap, found information that Pete thinks we should share for other interested readers. Here it is. Detlefsen (1899-1986) was born in Chicago, studied at Art Institute, Chicago, moved to Hollywood in 1922 and was apprenticed to Ferdinand Pinney Earle, an artist and independent film producer who trained him in set decoration. He soon became one of the early masters of special effects in silent films. He created backgrounds for Cecil B. DeMille in King of Kings and others. Later, he was with Warner Bros. for 20 years and shared a close friendship with Walt Disney. Due to the event of television, the motion picture business fell on hard times, and Dettlefsen moved to calendar art. His paintings of nostalgic American themes (ala Norman Rockwell) were reproduced by the thousands by Brown & Bigelow Co. and currently by Vernon Co. Most of the paintings are oil on masonite size 20x28-inches. Upon retirement, Detlefsen moved to San Diego until his death. He was also an Academy Award winner in 1944 for special effects (photographic) for the film "The Adventures of Mark Twain."

ANSWER - Sara Newswanger, Narvon, wanted to know of a seed catalog that has Love Me Begonia seeds, which are also called Christmas Begonia or Busy Lizzie. It is an old-time houseplant with a single pink flower on a cluster. Thanks to Mary, Seven Valleys, who thinks the best seed company for these, for the iris bulbs, and for the yellow impatiences is Burpee Seed Co. Call 1-800-888-1447.

ANSWER — Jean Kriebel, Harleysville, is looking for seeds or plants for yellow impatiens. Mary, Seven Valleys, recommends Burpee Seed Co. Telephone 1-800-888-1447.

ANSWER — A reader from Ephrata wanted to know where to purchase rubber or plastic ends for croquet mallets. She has two good sets but the plastic ends are broken. Contact Martin's Sharpening, 502 Glenwood Dr., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Farm Policy To Be Issue For 2000

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Chairmen of key congressional committees disagree on whether farm policy should be overhauled, but some lawmakers predict at least some tinkering with the market-oriented policies that became law in 1996.

"I think there's enough desire on the part of my farm-state colleagues to make changes," said Rep. Jo Ann Emerson, R-Mo., a member of the House Appropriations agriculture subcommittee.

She applauded Agriculture Committee Chairman Larry Combest, R-Texas, for scheduling hearings on farm policy from February through March in Washington and seven to 12 regions nationwide.

Shrinking export markets have sent prices for wheat, corn, soybeans and other crops plummeting, and the Agriculture Department forecast for 2000 is bleak, too. Farm income is predicted to drop $7.6 billion next year to $40.4 billion, unless Congress takes the unlikely step — because it is an election year — of another multibillion-dollar bailout.

"We're looking at the third year in a row of a disastrous ag situation," Combest said in a recent interview. "We've got to look at this. Something is not working."

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman agreed, saying Congress has lurched from one patchwork emergency bill to the next. His comments came in October on the heels of an $8.7 billion emergency aid package.

"And we shouldn't wait until the expiration of the farm bill in 2002," Glickman said. "The fact is, with two years of emergency payments to farmers, Congress has already seriously amended the farm bill. What is needed now is a thought-out, well-balanced farm bill that we can work on if we address it early in the year — before we are looking again at emergency farm legislation."

Trouble is, there's not much consensus in Congress or among the major farm interest groups on what should be done.

Combest Senate counterpart, Agriculture Committee Chairman Dick Lugar, R-Ind., has no plans for hearings because he believes there is no need to change farm policy. Several farm-state Democrats, meanwhile, will be pushing to boost U.S. farm subsidies as a tool in trade negotiations with the Europeans.

Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., said change in farm policy, even before the current law expires in 2002, is inevitable. Citing statements by Glickman and by President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, Roberts said the question is not whether Freedom to Farm will be rewritten, but when and how.

Roberts, who as House Agriculture Committee chairman was chief author of the 1996 reforms, argues it is disingenuous to blame the farm bill for a failing safety net when its components — a crop insurance overhaul, aggressive trade policies and regulatory and tax reforms — were never put in place.

Not only the administration but GOP leaders in Congress have failed, he said. This year, Roberts plans to introduce his own package that incorporates those elements as an alternative to rewriting farm policy.

"It's like Freedom to Farm was the horse you wanted to ride in the Derby, but you hobbled him first — there's no jockey, no saddle and all the rest," he said. "We said these component parts had to be part of the policy or this wouldn't work."

Many regard trade issues as having the best potential to shore up struggling farmers.

One of the administration's top priorities in a new round of global trade talks is to get the European Union to lower its farm subsidies. EU farm supports are worth $324 per acre, compared with $34 for the United States, according to the Agriculture Department. Canada and Australia are even lower.

Combest said his House panel also will consider proposals for bolstering U.S. export programs to counter European crop subsidies.

Local Dealer Takes Farmers To Louisville Show

Sponsored by Hoober, Inc., this group of farmers went to the Louisville National Farm Machinery Show last week.

With the help of Hoober, Inc. more than 100 area farmers traveled to Kentucky for agriculture's premier machinery showcase, the National Farm Machinery Show in Louisville.

More than 800 exhibitors were on hand at Freedom Hall to show their products during the 35th annual event, making the Louisville's National Farm Machinery Show the largest indoor farm show in America.

Each year, Hoober, Inc. brings customers from their stores in Intercourse, McAlisterville, and Middletown, DE, to Louisville for the show. Hoober makes all of the travel, transportation and hotel arrangements and plants group dinner and evening activities as well.

"We have a lot of customers who like to come to the show to see the newest equipment and to see equipment they can't see in our part of the country at shows or anywhere else," said Larry Herr of Hoober, Inc. when asked why the dealership brings farmers to Louisville each year.

From the farmers standpoint, seeing so much equipment at one show definitely makes an impact, which is saying quite a bit since, in general, farmers are not easily impressed.

"This is what the Pennsylvania Farm Show used to be," said dairy farmer Roy Hetrick from Bernville. "We're here to see the new equipment. They have larger equipment here than they have at the Pennsylvania shows and our operation uses bigger equipment, so it's good to know what's available."

This is where the leading edge in agriculture is," added Mechanicsville's Joe Matejik. "When you read about something in a magazine, it's already been at this show."

While the trip, which includes a night of high-horsepower tractor pulling action, is fun for the farmers, it is also an educational opportunity, a chance to catch a glimpse at the future of farming.

"There's always new technology here and it's all under one roof," said farmer Bill Dietrich of Lehigh County. "I'm interested in the short line companies. Coming to this show is a chance to see what we can do to maybe tweak our present equipment to make it perform a little bit better.

"Plus I've learned a lot," Dietrich added. "I use a zone tillage system and I've always been looking to place my starter fertilizer for corn a little closer to the seed. This morning I found a company that can place the fertilizer in the furrow, just along side the seed. You pick up stuff like that here. You wouldn't learn about that back home."

Another positive aspect of the Louisville show is that each farmer, regardless of what they're looking for or what they're interested in, can find an exhibitor to meet their needs. Dan Seiple came looking for a used sprayer; others came for a glimpse at the new farm machinery, while one of Matejik's goals was to find some different attachments for his corn planter.

"At this show, if farmers are interested in one particular type of equipment, they'll probably see five or six different options from different manufacturer's," Herr pointed out. "It gives them an idea of what they might be able to invest in."

"The show also provides a big benefit for us," Herr added. "It gives us an opportunity as a company to see what new ideas and concepts are out there that we may be able to adapt to our farmers in the East. Many times we come here and learn things that we're able to then pass along to our customers."

And while being part of the three percent of the U.S. population that feeds the remaining 97% hasn't been easy in recent years, many at the Louisville show were trying to remain optimistic.

"There's a good future in farming, there really is," said Hetrick, a man with 52 years of farming experience under his belt. "You have to be focused, you have to be consistent, you have to work hard and you have to be a good manager. But there's a lot of opportunities. It's going to have to be on a more volume and quality scale, though."

"We're in a rough down cycle," said Matejik, "but I think we're going to turn the corner here and come out of the bottom pretty soon."

Regardless of their view on the current situation and the outlook for the future, most echoed the sentiments of Dietrich.

"I'm going to stick it out," said Dietrich when asked about his future plans. "We're in a low period right now, but I believe we'll eventually come through this. Farming is in my blood and as long as I can continue to economically do it, one way or another I'm going to keep going."

With the technology, machinery and educational opportunities available at the National Farm Machinery Show in Louisville, it's not surprising that many of the farmers who made the journey are grateful for the opportunity provided by Hoober to experience the show in person.

"It's a good opportunity," Hetrick said of the show, "and it's great that Hoober makes all the arrangements. It makes it easy for us. Plus you get to travel with good people with the same interest you have."

"I think Hoober really appreciates their customers," said first-time visitor Matt Sowers of Mifflinburg. "I think the people at Hoober understand what it is to farm and what it is to be in agriculture. That's why they're leaps and bounds ahead of everybody else when it comes to service. I think they do this out of a sense of appreciation."

"It says a lot for the company," agreed Dietrich, who was making his fourth trip to the show with Hoober. "They have the same values as we do and to have them put something like this together just makes you feel like you're part of their family."

And while most were still trying to absorb all they had seen at this year's show, it's a pretty safe bet that many will be returning to Louisville next year for the 36th annual National Farm Machinery Show.

Leadership, Services Lead CAB Into 2000

WOOSTER, Ohio–New leadership and expanded producer services describe the Certified Angus Beef (CAB) Program's 21st year. Jim Riemann became the program's executive director in October, succeeding Louis M. "Mick" Colvin's 21-year reign.

Colvin started the program in 1978 with the idea of using reliable standards to determine beef quality. Since then, 11.5 million cattle earned the Certified Angus Beef label. In 1999 alone, about a half billion pounds (493 million) of this beef brand reached grocery stores and restaurants in the U.S. and 46 international locations.

"Angus producers deserve much credit for including consumer preferences in production decisions by using the Angus database and carcass merit EPD," Riemann said. "Consumers are recognizing the Certified Angus Beef brand stands for high quality. We need to intensity our efforts at helping retailers and restaurateurs present to consumers so it becomes a destination product." Fiscal 1999 marked the most cattle identified for the CAB Program, at about 9.5 million head, and the highest average carcass acceptance rate since the licensing of major packers, 20.4 percent. Its 493 million pounds sold marked an average of more than 25 percent growth over the last four years and more than 500 percent growth for the decade.

Future program growth will come from supply development steps toward vertical cooperation. The formation of the feeder-packer relations division spurred the opening of a satellite office in Manhattan, Kan., to facilitate the Feedlot Licensing Program. By Oct. 1, that division licensed 35 feedlots in 11 states with a one-time capacity of 460,000 head.

Some 84 percent of the 8,000 feed cattle enrolled the first year met visual requirements for Certified Angus Beef acceptance. At processing, carcass acceptance rates ran 5 percentage points ahead of the program's overall 20.4 percent mark.

That higher rate came from better identifying Angus-type cattle, and should climb as feedlots apply lessons from the division's commitment to quality seminars. These emphasize both proper product use and management for higher quality beef.

Progeny testing for carcass merit enjoyed another record year. The Carcass Data Collection and Analysis Service collected information on 17,619 progeny by Sept. 30, compared to 16,215 by that date in 1998. Sire-identified progeny testing climbed from 4,603 head in 1998 to 4,885. Certified Angus Beef acceptance also climbed a full percentage point for all progeny and two points for sire-identified cattle.

The percentage of sires in the 1999 Fall Sire Summary with actual or interim carcass EPDs hit a record 71 percent, well ahead of the 60 percent goal for 2002.

Looking at the program's overall impact, the international division increased the program's global span to include 459 restaurants and 495 retail stores. Food Service grew the licensed U.S. restaurant base to 2,800, and reported 56 percent of its 140 million pounds sold as end meats. Retail grew to sales of 279 million pounds through more than 3,500 U.S. licensees, including Albertson's 475 stores in 12 western states. Value-added products grew by one-third to approach 10 million pounds sold.

In-store displays, recipe cards, and promotions pointing out that "life can't have too much flavor" steered consumers to the Certified Angus Beef brand. In eight major metropolitan markets, coordinated advertising programs conveyed brand messages and the new, toll-free tip line at 1-877-2-EAT-CAB assisted 1,000 callers in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, U.S. Virgin Islands, and Mexico with information needs. A new Internet initiative led to the creation of a new Website for consumers, www.2eatcab.com, to be released in March 2000.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. Has A Heavy Duty KNIGHT

One day in 1949, a friend told Stan Knight, "I wish someone would make a spreader that would not break down with frozen manure." That challenge to the founder of Knight Manufacturing led to the Knight heavy duty manure spreaders that were soon on the market. The common focus of Knight spreaders to this day is that they are simple and rugged and designed to give many years of service.

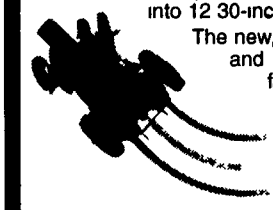
Industry Leading Turning Radius

The revolutionary chassis of the MX Series Magnum improves your overall performance and productivity. In fact, the innovative Surround frame allows for the tightest turning radius in the industry, even with front duals!

Thanks to axle improvements, engine placement and a sleek hood design, the MX Series Magnum can easily turn into 12 30-inch rows with all row crop tire configurations on true 60-inch tread settings.



The new, single-piece, sculpted, cast iron Surround frame is the key to the enhanced capabilities and performance of these tractors. It enables the MX Series Magnum to offer the first factory front duals, dramatically improving both traction and flotation By balancing the chassis, we've significantly reduced the amount of front ballast required. And the frame easily accomodates mounted chemical tanks or loaders, allowing you to perform multiple applications

CASE III

"If our equipment wasn't fixed, we would have been in deep...uh...doo-doo."

Jerry Eller and Duane Elville of E&H Conveyors in Oxford, PA, rely on their eight gen sets to clean out mushroom houses for new crops...with eight crews working six days a week.

When one of their units broke down one Friday night, they called Deer Creek Equipment at 8:30 p.m. But when the Deer Creek Service Manager, Walt Hill, looked at their rig, he realized it was beyond repair.

"We rely on these units for our livelihood. We couldn't clean out the houses without it, and we were looking at losing money every day it was down."

Deer Creek came up with a solution. They had a new John Deere Power Tech Engine unit in stock. They started to work on Saturday, and on Monday E&H Conveyors was back to full strength.

"Thanks to Deer Creek, we didn't lose a day's work. And we liked the new John Deere unit so much, we've decided to replace all of our Izuzu engines with new John Deere engines from Deer Creek. Deer Creek Equipment really made the difference - we won't go anywhere else."

Company Receives Award

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.)–Chore-Time-Brock, Inc. has awarded Northeast Agri Systems, Lititz, and Federalsburg, Md., the "Chairman of the Board Award" for 1999. This is the 16th consecutive year that Northeast has received this award. The "Chairman of the Board Award" is Chore-Time's highest award and recognizes distributors with the largest sales volume and for excellence in customer service. Pictured are David Newman, general manager of Northeast Agri Systems and Chris Chocola, chairman of the board of Chore-Time-Brock, Inc.

Loader Designed For Tough Terrain

FARGO, N.D.–Bobcat Company, a business unit of Ingersoll-Rand, introduced the Bobcat® 864 G-Series Compact Track Loader featuring a next-generation cab and instrumentation that increase operator comfort and enhances productivity.

The Bobcat 864's dedicated track system improves flotation, traction, and maneuverability. It has a rated operating capacity (ROC) of 2,000 pounds at 35 percent of its 5,715 pound tipping load, the standard measurement for compact track loaders.

Rubber tracks on the Bobcat 864 distribute weight over a larger area than is possible with a wheeled machine, delivering a smoother rider in rough terrain and improving maneuverability. This increased ground-to-surface contact also improves traction and flotation for greater productivity in soft, wet, muddy, or sandy conditions.

Operators have a choice of two track widths: 12.6 or 17.7 inches. The narrow track provides better traction for general digging and excavating applications and the wide track provides improved flotation in soft ground conditions. As track width increases, ground pressure decreases. In fact, the 12.6-inch track exerts only 5.2 pounds per square inch (PSI) of ground pressure, and the 17.7-inch track exerts just 3.8 PSI. (By comparison, an average-size man exerts 7-10 PSI).

The 864 Compact Track Loader design is based on the popular long-wheelbase Bobcat 863 skid-steer loader with a similar upper-frame structure, lift arms, operator cab, and controls. However, the 864 features a unique lower transmission design which allows for more than 11 inches of center ground clearance. The increased clearance adds to the 864's effectiveness in wet or soggy conditions.

The 864 features a powerful 73 HP turbo-charged diesel engine. The drive train uses two high-torque, direct-drive hydrostatic motors that connect to the track drive sprocket, providing enough power to perform in the toughest digging applications. The 864 is designed to endure the rugged environments of excavating, land clearing, and construction, yet is light-footed enough for landscaping and tree nurseries.

More than two dozen job-matched attachments are approved for use on the new compact track loader, including a dozer blade, various buckets, hydraulic breaker, grapples, pallet forks, landscaping attachments, rotary cutter, tree transplanter, snowblower, trencher, and vibratory roller.

Based on input from skid-steer loader users around the globe, the G-series was designed to be more operator-friendly and enhance operator efficiency. Bobcat G-Series cab enhancements include a new rear-pivot seat bar that offers more room for larger operators and more armrest support; an optional contoured cab door that increases visibility and maximizes cab space; a larger cab opening for easy entry and exit; and a high-efficiency heating and cooling system with four directional-flow vents that rotate to direct heat and cool air where it is most needed.

The optional deluxe instrument panel includes a variety of patent-pending features, including a keyless start security system, advanced monitoring and diagnostic capabilities, system shutdown protection and help menus with multi-language support.

Balers Produce Dense Bales

COLUMBUS, Ind. – Claas of America's new Rollant 250 family of balers produce extremely dense bales for high quality feed. The balers, which handle silage, hay or straw, feature a 49 inch x 47 inch baling chamber and 16 steel ribbed rollers for heavy duty work and increased bale density.

The Rollant 250 balers now feature the Claas Maximum Pressure System (MPS), a completely new concept developed by Claas, which increases bale density without the need for higher power. Claas engineers developed MPS to increase the amount of crop in each bale, cutting the number of bales produced per acre while simultaneously decreasing the amount of twin or net needed.

The Maximum Pressure System consists of three rollers at the top of the bale chamber, forming a hinged segment. The rollers are dropped down into the bale chamber at an early stage, causing bale rotation to begin much earlier in the baling process. Compression sets in much faster, resulting in a rock hard bale that is dense from the center to the outside parameter. In fact, improvements of up to 20 percent have been measured in straw and silage.

Claas of America's new Rollant 250 family of balers produce extremely dense bales for high quality feed. The balers handle silage, hay or straw and feature a large 49 inches x 47 inches baling chamber and 16 steel ribbed rollers for increased bale density.

The Rollant 250 is also available with the new Claas Control Terminal (CCT). This computerized terminal utilizes the latest technology to simplify the baling process. The CCT automatically starts the wrapping process when the final bale pressure is reached. The tailgate then opens and the finished bale is ejected out of the machine. The tailgate also closed automatically Meanwhile, the CCT gives the operator a constant stream of information on baling pressure, knife position and tying.

The Rollant 250 features an 83 inches pickup, lateral pickup augers and a feed assist rake. The Rollant 250 increases intake volumes and improves precompression. The Rollant 250 is also available with the Claas Roto Cut option which produces cleanly cut crops while increasing bale density and speed of production. The Rollant 250 RC's rotor is equipped wit four rows of tines that pull the crop through 14 knives and is capable of making up to 7,000 chops per minute. The chopping unit is easily engaged or disengaged from the cab. For addition ease of operation, the Rollant 250 and Rollant 250 RC models are available with the CCT option.

Chore Time Offers Reversible Drinker System With Pig Paddle Feeder

MILFORD, Ind.–Chore-Time Hog Production Systems offers an optional reversible drinker system for its Wet/Dry Wean-Finish Paddle Feeder.

The new water system assists producers who want to dry feed small pigs and then switch to wet feeding as the pigs grow larger in the wean-finish production system. The new system was designed by the company's Staco subsidiary.

The new drinker system allows the paddle feeder to be operated as a dry feeder with a drinker station located on the feeder during the crucial start-up period for early-weaned pigs. In the dry feeding configuration, small pigs can access water on the outside of the paddle feeder where the nipple drinkers are mounted about 10 inches (254 millimeters) off the floor.

When the young pigs reach an adequate size, the water system is reversed with the nipple drinkers positioned lower and inside the feeder's feed trough. It takes the producer about 15 seconds to detach, turn, and then reattach the drinker system. In the wet feeding configuration, the pigs naturally mix feed and water in the eating trough. Locating the drinkers inside the eating trough also helps reduce water waste.

Chore-Time Hog Production Systems Wet/Dry Finish Paddle Feeder assists producers who want to dry feed small pigs and then switch to wet feeding as the pigs grow larger in the wean-finish production system.

The reversible drinker system concept helps solve several problems associated with wet feeding in wean-finish facilities. Most producers prefer dry feeding nursery pigs, so this drinker option allows the producer to conveniently switch from dry to wet feeding whenever desired. The same water system and nipple drinker combination is used in both configurations.

This new water option helps to eliminate the need for supplemental watering systems as well as the accompanying concerns that finishing pigs could damage a supplemental system installed for small pigs. Producers using this feeder also will no longer need to open and shut valves or disassemble and remove watering systems in mid-cycle.

Chore-Time's paddle feeder is a true wet feeder that allows pigs to mix feed and water for better digestion. The feed is dispensed from a nudge bar accessible to all pigs sizes. Small pigs do not need to lift their heads to an awkward position to access feed; nor do they need to step over an excessively high trough lip. The dispensing and consumption of the feed from an area below their jowls allows all pigs, regardless of their size, to eat from a natural, comfortable position.

This feeder is universal as it can feed nursery, finisher, or wean-finish pigs. Regardless of whether it is being utilized as a dry feeder or as a wet feeder, it can be positioned in the fenceline or in the center of the pen.

Forest Account Book Available

WESTMINSTER, Md.–April 1 is fast approaching, and taxpayers everywhere are getting their financial paperwork in order. Forest landowners are no exception.

Fortunately, a new publication from Maryland Cooperative Extension, part of the University of Maryland College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, can serve as a valuable financial management tool, at tax time and all year long.

"The Forest Management Account Book (EB360) is intended to help individuals who manage their forestlands for their own enjoyment or as a secondary source of income, organize their business expenses," said Bob Tjaden, extension regional natural resources specialist.

"It provides them with a means of keeping up-to-date records of their forest management activities," said Faculty Extension Assistant Julie Klapproth, who co-authored the book with Tjaden.

Specifically, the publication helps private forest landowners:

- Maintain a historical record of their management activities.
- Keep records of the costs and revenues associated with forest ownership.
- Report and support their income tax decisions.
- Establish a current picture of their forest assets.

The 59-page resource includes a "tree farm journal" that landowners can use to keep track of their expenses and income throughout the year. It also describes the federal tax law and how to handle various forest management expenses, such as tree planting, harvesting income, cost-share payments, and casualty/loss provisions.

Record sheets are provided for use in reporting forest management expenses and revenues for federal income tax purposes, along with a copy of the Internal Revenue Form T (Timber) –Forest Activities Schedules, which should be used to report timber sales income.

Copies of the Forest Management Account Book can be purchased for $4.50 from local Maryland Cooperative Extension Offices.

"The purchase of Madison Dairy will allow us to continue to build our flagship butter business and serve our consumers' and customers' changing needs."

Genetically Engineered Food Could Be Lifeline For Developing World, Cornell Researcher Suggests

WASHINGTON, D.C.–In the developed world, societies enjoy abundant diets more varied now than at any other time in history. That's in stark contrast to the developing world where millions of people confront profound food insecurity every day. Part of the solution to righting this imbalance might involve something that is increasingly controversial in the developed world: genetically engineered food.

Cornell University's Susan McCouch, associate professor of plant breeding, asks if it is ethical for well-fed people in the United States, Canada, and Europe to ignore the potential of biotechnology to improve the nutritional status of hungry people around the world, particularly when the same technology is being used to extend life expectancy by producing pharmaceuticals. McCouch made her observations in her talk, "Is Biotechnology the Answer?" at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Washington, D.C.

If used appropriately, agricultural biotechnology can help alleviate world hunger and malnutrition, said McCouch, noting the development of genetically engineered rice to produce iron or provitamin A (beta carotene) as an example of a product that has the potential directly to improve the quality of life for millions.

"People who suffer from malnutrition generally lack essential levels of micronutrients because they lack the purchasing power to obtain sufficient diversity in their diet," said McCouch. The impact of delivering those essential micronutrients through food products such as enriched yellow rice is parallel (in the United States) to fortifying milk with vitamin D, salt with iodine, or orange juice with calcium." Transgenic rice, she noted, offers immediate assistance as a staple food to people in need.

McCouch said she believes there is evidence of public support for the use of genetic engineering to improve diet and nutrition in the developing world. In her view, people support the technology when they see societal benefits, not just corporate benefits. Some opinion surveys show that people initially are uncomfortable with the idea of using biotechnology to transfer genes between organisms, she said, but those reservations can be overcome if people perceive a particular ethically or morally persuasive benefit.

McCouch said that careful consideration must be given to different kinds of agricultural systems around the world, and the risks weighed against the benefits to those different systems. "Clearly, not all people have the same choices nor will they have the same preferences," she said.

While the term biotechnology was originally coined during the industrial revolution, it has evolved into its contemporary meaning only in the last 25 years, which McCouch defined as modifying living things to suit human needs and preferences.

"According to this definition, humans have practiced biotechnology for about 10,000 year, or as long as they have practiced agriculture," she said.

"Most of our domesticated food and fiber species have been altered through traditional crossing and selection to such an extent that they are no longer capable of surviving in the wild," said McCouch. Instead they prosper when nurtured and cultivated by human beings. The interaction of natural processes and human activity has given rise to novel agro-ecosystems and is responsible for generating and sustaining a vast array of genetic and ecological diversity on the planet.

Today, most people associate biotechnology with genetic manipulation at the DNA level, said McCouch. But not all biotechnology involves genetic engineering. "A large part of what biotechnology represents today is new knowledge about the natural processes of DNA replication, breakage, ligation and repair that has paved the way for a much deeper understanding of the mechanics of cell biology and the hereditary process itself."

This new knowledge, she said, has brought us to the edge of an ethical dilemma. While the ability to manipulate the hereditary process is not new, the depth of our understanding of this process has changed and the knowledge we have gained has opened up an endless array of possibilities for affecting future evolutionary trajectories.

"How the potential of the human imagination and creative spirit should be nurtured, guided, interpreted and ultimately directed and controlled with respect to biotechnology is a question of profound social, economical and ethical dimensions," said McCouch. "It deserves to be discussed, contemplated and digested at all levels of society."

Changing Silo Styles May Eventually Alter Rural Skyline

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–Nothing says "country" like a stately barn flanked by a majestic silo. That visual image may slowly become a thing of the past, as more farmers opt for different types of storage silos, said an agricultural engineer in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Every farm is different, and every farmer has personal preferences for certain types of storage facilities, but nowadays many farms have stopped using tower silos in favor of other storage systems," said Dennis Buckmaster, associate professor of agricultural engineering.

In Pennsylvania, silos typically are used to store livestock forage to feed the animals over the entire year. The forage is usually corn silage or hay crop (grass or alfalfa) silage. Buckmaster said that as farms expand and herd sizes increase, many producers are opting to use different silage systems to lower costs or increase efficiency.

Buckmaster says each silo system has advantages.

•Top-unloading tower silo: Most of these silos are used in conjunction with a conveyor system to prepare and deliver mixed livestock feed. One person can operate the entire system, but it can be time-consuming for large herds (200 cows or more).

•Bottom-unloading tower silo: Unloading and feeding is automated as well. Bottom unloading silos have the least amount of storage loss of any silo, but they also are the most expensive to build, according to Buckmaster. "Tower silos take up less space, but that is probably oversold as an advantage," Buckmaster said.

•Bunker Silo: Also called horizontal silos, these typically are constructed as 8- to 20-foot trenches surrounded on three sides with earthen or concrete walls. The stored feed is covered by plastic. "A bunker silo is low cost and can be filled rapidly and fed out rapidly," Buckmaster said. "This is more efficient for farms that have a large herd and use drive-through barns to feed."

•Stack or Pile: This is nothing more than piling feed on a concrete slab and covering it with plastic. Piling feed is more a short-term option.

•Silo Bags: These long, heavy plastic tubes resemble immense sausages and can be stored wherever the farmer wants to put them. They have low storage loss, if farmers manage the feed properly and make sure the bags do not develop holes.

•Plastic-wrapped Round Bales: These individual storage bales, which look like giant marshmallows, can be very efficient for smaller operations. "The same equipment is used to make both the individual round bales for silage, and for harvesting the forage crop as dry hay," Buckmaster said. "There's no need to invest in equipment to operate or unload other silo types."

Buckmaster says bunker silos–with low cost of construction and faster feeding for large numbers of animals–are the most popular choice for most farmers these days. "There aren't as many safety issues with bunker silos," Buckmaster said. "There is little threat from gases or dust, and if it catches on fire there is no structure to collapse."

Buckmaster said people with nostalgia for old barns and silos needn't worry about losing their bucolic rural views–yet. "For now, you'll still see tall silos, but many of the older, smaller silos less than 60 feet tall may be empty," he said. "Most will remain standing for years to come. Silos have a very long life–the three tower silos on my family's farm have been up for more than 30 years, and they're still going strong."

Lancaster Farmland Trust Approves Preservation

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)–The Lancaster Farmland Trust Board of Trustees approved the preservation of two county farms at their February meeting: a 14-acre farm in Brecknock Township and a 73-acre farm in Martic Township. Both have fine soils are close to other preserved farms.

Dr. John Schwartz, chairman of the board of trustees, commented, "The donation of these easements represents a substantial contribution on the part of both farm owners. We are fortunate that these generous farmers are willing to do their part to ensure the future of farming in Lancaster County."

Some of the world's richest and most productive farmland exists in Lancaster County. Unfortunately, the county continues to lose between 1,000 and 2,000 acres a year to nonagricultural uses.

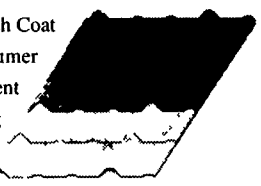
Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process
"The Best"



1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3. Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4. G-100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6. Heat formed, less paint cracks
7. 6 Cove Width

Everlast II

NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention.

2. Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion

3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment. This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider.

4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint. G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels

5 Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc

6 Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed. Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks. (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years).

7. Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F

8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$46.74 PER SQUARE
$1.48 PER LINEAL FT.
